Zoning Rules Lag Still A Year Later

"These rules and regulations are all a joke if we don't enforce them," said Commissioner Bruce Hamilton, referring to the lack of enforcement of the county's 12-year-old zoning regulations.

That remark was made one year ago. Today the commissioners are only a few inches closer to enforcing the building permit requirements in the now 13-year-old rules.

After a few meetings last year the commissioners finally decided to let the City Building Inspection Division take on-the-enforcement task for county building permits and even put money in the budget for the job.

Then the idea and the money lay dormant for months . . . 12 months.

Tuesday morning the commissioners will again tackle the question with inspection division chief Charles Seale. Seale is willing and ready to do the job, but feels that the county's zoning rules should be changed a bit —

Analysis Contends Ship Excuse Invalid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Lee Aspin accused the Navy Monday of continuing to ask for extra money to reverse a Soviet shipbuilding lead when he said that trend already has been reversed.

The Wisconsin Democrat released a 23-page analysis by his staff concluding America will regain by 1981 at present rates the lead it lost in major surface warships to the Soviets in 1973.

The analysis also concludes that the 4-1 superiority the Soviets had in submarines in 1968 will be down to 2 to 1 in 1981 at present rates.

According to Aspin's analysis, the number of U.S. surface warships is beginning to gain on the Soviets again after losing 3-2 superiority over the Soviets in 1973.

It says America's 335-305 lead in warships over the Soviets in 1968 fell to about 180 American to about 223 Soviet by 1974 largely because scores of World War II ships had to be retired.

But Aspin's staff said the U.S. warships are up to 184 now and projected they will rise to 206 in 1981 while the Soviets' will fall to 185 because of obsolescence of ships built in the 1950's.

Aspin's analysis of 1975 figures for numbers of Soviet and U.S. ships, showed the United States led only in aircraft carriers — 22 to 2 helicopter carriers for the Soviets.

Despite the greater number of Soviet ships in most categories, Pentagon officials agree the U.S. Navy is still superior primarily because of its airpower from carriers.

But the Navy said its concern is that further expansion by the Soviets could wipe out that U.S. advantage.

"What must be understood is that the United States is not engaged in a shipbuilding race with the Soviets," the Navy said in its reply to Aspin. "What the United States is determined to do is maintain Naval superiority in the face of Soviet expansion."

Leftists Claim Penetration

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas and leftist Lebanese forces claimed Monday they punched deep into the Christian heartland from north Lebanon.

Arab League Secretary-General Mahmoud Riad announced in Damascus that a scheduled meeting between Christian and Moslem Lebanese leaders was postponed indefinitely "because of the crazy escalation of the fighting."

The leftist-controlled Beirut radio claimed Moslem forces occupied Chekka, a Christian town 40 miles north of Beirut. It said they then advanced to within four miles of Amchit, the site of the Christian-controlled radio, almost halfway to the capital.

The radio said the attackers, making a two-pronged assault from the sea and mountains, destroyed 30 of the defenders' tanks and vehicles.

The Christian Amchit radio denied Chekka had fallen. It said the attack was repulsed.

In the capital, a Red Cross convoy trying to evacuate wounded from a besieged Palestinian refugee camp turned back Monday after both sides broke an agreement to stop shooting during the humanitarian mission.

A spokesman for the International Red Cross said the convoy was attempting to take out an estimated 300 wounded from underground first-aid bunkers at Tal Zaatar camp.

The camp, surrounded inside Christian-held east Beirut, has been under siege for two weeks, defended by diehard Palestinian guerrillas and leftists in a critical battle of the 15-month-old civil war.

The Christian noose around Tal Zaatar has tightened until only a devastated central section of the 74-acre shanty town remains in the hands of the defenders.

Christians, blasting the camp from point-blank range with artillery and mortars, said it was about to fall. Palestinians said the defense was holding and had driven off assaults with large losses.

Fifty Red Cross volunteers in 19 trucks flying Red Cross flags and driven by Armenians who have been neutral in the civil war, gathered in the no man's land between Christian and Moslem-controlled sectors of Beirut to begin the planned rescue mission.

A scout car, driven by Dr. E. Spaggi, a Swiss Red Cross doctor, drove to the edge of the camp. Spaggi said as he arrived 10 shells fell near the spot where the trucks were to pick up the wounded.

The Red Cross contacted both sides by radio, pleading for an end to shelling, but it continued. Shooting also broke out in the area where the convoy was marshaled and the mission was abandoned.

A Red Cross official said he doubted whether a new convoy could be mounted. "Somebody just doesn't want that to happen, despite what the leaders are saying," he said.

Christian sources denied the claim that Chekka had been captured, though they admitted it was surrounded.

The leftist also claimed they captured a string of Christian fishing and farming villages on the Mediterranean coast between the major towns of Batroun and Byblos.

The leftist attack in the north was seen as an attempt to relieve the relentless attack on Tal Zaatar, which the Christians say is a nest of radical guerrillas and revolutionary leftists.

The Arab League mediators headed by Riad managed to bring together Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasir Arafat and representatives of the Phalange party Sunday night.

Riad announced earlier another meeting was scheduled for Monday. But this was postponed indefinitely, he announced when he returned to Damascus Monday afternoon.

An informed source said Arafat, who arrived in Beirut suddenly Sunday for urgent consultations with the Palestinian command, came from Egypt on a ship carrying flour.

The ship was driven away from the leftist-controlled port of Sidon by shellfire from the guns of Syrian ships blocking the coast. But Arafat got ashore in a small boat, the source said.

Out-Of-Pocket Gesture Ends Taxes Protest

By NANCY HICKS

Star Staff Writer

One taxpayer's small revolt paid off. Last week Thomas D. Rine of Lincoln barked vehemently and vocally when the Lancaster County treasurer's office sent him a 13-cent letter to tell him he owed eight cents more on his real estate tax payment.

This week Rine, an Omaha-based auctioneer, received a statement that his taxes were paid in full, plus a personal letter from County Treasurer Frank Golden.

Golden himself paid the pennies due on the taxes and the postage for the explanation, the letter said.

And from the looks of the letter, "Golden must have typed it himself," Rine said.

"There is no telling how many times I have reached into my own pocket . . ." Golden wrote in the letter to Rine.

And Golden is not the only county official who digs into his own wallet for small amounts of money when it would cost taxpayers more to process the paperwork for collection.

County Engineer Marv Nuernberger, a man who dislikes petty rules and bureaucratic nonsense, has more than once paid a $1 claim rather than send the claim through the long and costly chain of paperwork.

One time Nuernberger settled a dispute between neighboring farmers by buying an acre of land for $1 from one farmer.

It seems that the farmer who owned the land didn't want to pay taxes on the land which was cut off from his farm by rail tracks. He wanted to sell it to the adjacent neighbor who was already tilling the acre.

The neighbor knew he had a good deal and refused to buy.

So Nuernberger stepped in, purchased the land for the county and paid the $1 himself.

Nuernberger recently paid a $1 road way easement cost out of his own pocket only to have the county attorney write that he needed to fork over another bill for a seven-foot right of way dedication on the same land.

With current state laws that require audits there is really no other way to buck the bureaucratic system. The official must either collect the piddling amounts at a much greater cost to the taxpayer or hand over the money himself.

And Golden made no excuses for the employee who sent Rine the request for 00000 08 cents. She did what she should have done, Golden wrote.

Obviously a little displeased with the furor and the news articles about Rine's mini-protest, Golden did add a little sarcastic jab of his own to the letter.

"I hope this satisfies your ego to its fullest extent," Golden wrote.

One Million Persons In The Dark In West

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A malfunction at a Wyoming power plant was blamed Monday for the Fourth of July electrical blackout that darkened most of Utah and parts of Nevada and Wyoming, officials said.

The power outage, which started about dinner time Sunday, lasted up to six hours and affected an estimated one million residents in the three states.

Utah Power & Light Co. spokesmen also said lights flickered in parts of Southern California and power was out briefly in areas of Las Vegas, Nev.

Police and fire departments, hospitals and the Salt Lake City International Airport switched to emergency generators. Authorities said there were no major problems due to the outage.

Radio and television stations went off the air, and many families with dinners in the oven had to switch to barbecues and eat by candlelight. Several people were caught in elevators between floors, but they were rescued.

David Mead, spokesman for Utah Power, said the blackout began about 5:50 p.m. when the protective relay at Kemmerer, Wyo., suddenly cut off for no apparent reason.

With the Kemmerer plant out of operation, other power plants in the area had to make up the difference — 675,000 kilowatts — but they couldn't.

"Suddenly there was more demand than electricity available. That's what caused the outage," Mead said.

Generators at the other power plants slowed down and then shut off automatically.

The protective relay was bypassed Monday, and crews were at the site to inspect the reason for the malfunction.

The relay is designed to isolate lines which may be struck by lightning or experience other problems, Mead said.

He called the malfunction "a rare, rare thing" and added, "We don't anticipate any more problems."

Hershey, Pa. — Nebraska Gov. J. James Exon won preliminary support Monday at the National Governors' Conference for his proposal to raise federal estate tax exemptions.

The conference's Rural and Urban Development Committee, on which Exon sits, also pushed ahead an idea for a presidentially appointed body of producers, distributors and consumers to help develop a national food policy.

But, after objection by Kansas Gov. Robert Bennett, the committee chairman, the members struck Exon's suggestion the advisory group function fundamentally as a "food and fiber board."

The conference has previously urged the creation of such a board, but with no tangible results.

Exon Prods Committee

The instant Exon prodded the committee to support workable agriculture policy goals that include "a concept of stability and equality of resource earnings for agriculture comparable with other sectors of the economy."

To compromise with his Kansas colleague, Exon agreed to substitute the word "quality" for "parity." That prompted a conference observer to murmur, "It'll never go through."

Exon's agriculture proposal, which would protect the family-sized farm and continuity in land ownership, will require approval from 33 of the 45 governors attending to be passed.

His proposal would "endure changes in the extended federal estate tax provisions by increasing exemptions from the current level of $30,000 to $350,000."

The proposal has won wide support recently, even from the White House. President Ford has called the current tax a "widow's tax" which jeopardizes family farm ownership.

Exon also won backing to write into the national agriculture development policy a section which urges federal cooperation to insure agriculture industry priority in any energy or fertilizer distribution or production plan.

The committee also agreed to insert another Exon-sponsored plank recommending legislation to raise grain target prices, and eliminate government interference with agriculture exports and price freezes aimed solely at agriculture products.

Exon engineered the retention of a section his committee previously had used from standing policy. It urges the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to redesign rules on predator control, and brands the training and licensing requirements for farmers an "unnecessary burden."

The Nebraska Legislature is currently reviewing its own pesticide application law.

Few Federal Interference

On the long-standing food and fiber board concept, Bennett opposed a Ford-appointed advisory panel, because he fears it would lead to a repeat of federal interference and regulation, such as acreage restrictions.

Exon argued unsuccessfully that farmers need an information system that such a board would provide to combat what he said could be a "protein-starved world."

Exon also noted that foreign competition is increasing in certain crops, particularly soybeans. He said U.S. food policy must recognize the effect of competition on American farmers, "rather than the hand-to-mouth" practice now existing.

The farmer's return on agriculture investment is far below what other economic sectors enjoy, Exon said. Bennett countered that there is "too much government in farming right now."

But Exon maintained that the U.S. Department of Agriculture has been unresponsive to local needs. Bennett and Missouri Gov. Christopher Bond agreed, but said USDA can furnish necessary information without establishing another bureaucratic board.

After listening to the federal position, William H. Walker, assistant agriculture secretary for rural development, frankly acknowledged the federal interference charges.

A Tennessee farmer himself, Walker agreed with Nebraska farmers who told him they "don't want Washington telling them what rural development should be."

Exon reiterated his charge that USDA "has interfered more than anyone else with the freedom of the farmer." Walker emphasized that the federal role should focus on requested assistance.

Walker pointed out a rural emigration tailback of about one 1.6 million persons the past decade. Such a sustained trend is healthy, he said, but warned the governors it will create "new problems states and counties must face."

He implied those governments haven't given the prospect much thought.

The committee also proposed consolidating HEW, Agriculture, Commerce, and HED-administered community development programs, and expand cooperation with state programs. Consolidation "should not result in decreased funding."

primarily to bring the terminology in line with city zoning language, said Commissioner Jan Gauger.

The contract with Seale's department was delayed this winter because the city department could not find qualified people to hire for the enforcement job, she explained.

And during the past year more buildings have gone up in the county without permits, said County Engineer Marv Nuernberger.

He doesn't know the exact number; his department stopped reporting permit violations.

"We've almost quit looking for building permit violations because no one does anything about them after we've found them . . . They go into somebody's file and sit," he said.

One year ago an optimistic Hamilton urged fellow commissioners to resolve the issue quickly. "I don't want to have 12 more meetings this year" on the issue, he said at that time.

"What must be understood is that the United States is not engaged in a shipbuilding race with the Soviets," the Navy said in its reply to Aspin. "What the United States is determined to do is maintain Naval superiority in the face of Soviet expansion."

Accusing the Navy of "fudging the facts," Aspin said in a statement the trends have been reversed; the U.S. Navy is now expanding once again while the Soviet navy is shrinking."

The Navy did not dispute Aspin's prediction that it will regain its surface warship lead over the Soviets in the 1980s. But it said its contention that it therefore should stop asking for extra money is a "fallacious argument" because it takes money to make such improvements.

President Ford and the Navy first requested $6.3 billion for shipbuilding next year, then asked an extra $1.7 billion citing the Soviet naval buildup as one reason. Congress authorized $7.6 billion.

Plains, Ga. (UPI) — Jimmy Carter met with Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine for several hours Monday and called him "completely qualified" for the vice presidency. But Carter said he will not select a running mate "for at least another week."

Muskie was the first of a half-dozen senators expected to be interviewed personally by Carter about the Democratic vice presidential nomination. He reiterated he will not make his final selection until after his own nomination is assured at the Democratic National Convention next week.

"I will wait until after, as I've said, another week at least, before I make up my mind," Carter said as he saw Muskie off at a grass-strip airport. "We'll discuss it further later."

Departing about 12 hours after his 1:20 a.m. arrival, Muskie told reporters he and Carter discussed the role of the vice president. Muskie, who was Hubert Humphrey's 1968 running mate, said he is not interested in serving without important duties.

He's a virtual dead-ringer for Jimmy Carter, the former Georgia governor who is the Democratic Party's nominee-to-be for president. He possibly could fool Carter's dentist.

What makes it all the more a tall-Mason-Dixon Line coincidence is that Williamson, 39, is Carter's chief spokesman in North Dakota and spent last month lining up the state's 13 delegates for him.

On paper, he didn't get them all, but he's certain they'll all vote for Carter.

Williamson was chairman of the Carter-for-President caucus at the state convention and was selected as a delegate to the national convention, which should make for a few double-takes in Madison Square Garden.

Muskie was the first of a half-dozen senators expected to be interviewed personally by Carter about the Democratic vice presidential nomination. He reiterated he will not make his final selection until after his own nomination is assured at the Democratic National Convention next week.

"I will wait until after, as I've said, another week at least, before I make up my mind," Carter said as he saw Muskie off at a grass-strip airport. "We'll discuss it further later."

Departing about 12 hours after his 1:20 a.m. arrival, Muskie told reporters he and Carter discussed the role of the vice president. Muskie, who was Hubert Humphrey's 1968 running mate, said he is not interested in serving without important duties.

"I would not be interested in any circumstances in simply occupying a chair," Muskie said. "I'd be interested in a job as full and satisfying, with at least as great potential, as the Senate."

"I got the strong impression after our discussion today that is the kind of role that the governor has in mind," Muskie said.

Carter said, "I would consider Sen. Muskie to be completely qualified to serve as president of this country and was hoping that he'd be president earlier or vice president, so there's been a very good relationship between us and I don't think there is any incompatibility at all. But I want to keep an open mind about the future."

Muskie and Carter, dressed casually and trailed by Secret Service agents and reporters, strolled four blocks into the center of town and shook hands with tourists.

Carter ran into his high school government teacher, Lillian Timmerman, who told Muskie, "He was a brilliant student. I taught his wife and she was, too."

Governors Tackle Welfare Motion

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — A bipartisan group of governors agreed Monday that welfare is a mess and that only the federal government can straighten it out with national funding to guarantee a minimum income for every American family.

There was no unanimity as the governors debated welfare at their annual National Governors Conference, but a consensus on the thorny topic began to emerge as they talked.

"The more you study the system, the more it cries out for reform," said Gov. Hugh Carey of New York, a Democrat.

Carey said the problem was not caused by mismanagement at the state level, but by the tangle of federal programs and requirements which make it impossible for states to administer welfare properly.

Gov. Dan Evans, the Washington Republican who headed a bipartisan task force which is recommending the reform package, said the jumble of programs has "resulted in administrative chaos."

"A program that was begun as a genuine humanitarian effort to help those who cannot help themselves has deteriorated through inefficiency and abuse into one which is almost totally divorced from public confidence," said Mississippi Gov. Cliff Finch, a Democratic member of the task force, in a statement read to the governors.

"There are some who need help in this country who don't get it," Evans said. "Some get help who don't need it."

The principal attack on the task force proposal came from Gov. Arch A. Moore Jr. of West Virginia, a Republican, who said it would simply transfer a headache from the states to the federal government while surrendering state authority.

"I'm not willing to transfer any more responsibility to Washington than they already have," Moore said. "I think they do a lousy job."

However, most comment on the proposal was favorable, even if reflecting an admission that the problem has become too great for the states to handle by themselves. Some kind of legislative recommendation is expected to be approved when it comes up for a vote Tuesday, although it will take a two-thirds majority.

The task force report also complained that the present system is not serving one poor for whom it was intended. "Only 62% of the poor in 1974 were eligible for federally supported cash grants," it said.

The task force program would have the federal government set an unspecified income floor, with regional cost of living adjustments.

Total funding of the minimum supports would come from the federal government, although states could approve more if they choose.

Recipients would be required to register for work and accept any reasonable jobs which could be found, unless they were under 17, over 60, in high school, disabled or had small children or other dependents who needed constant care.

A similar program was proposed by the U.S. Conference of Mayors at their annual convention last week in Milwaukee. Other reform demands have come recently from the National Association of Counties, the National Urban League and the American Public Welfare Association.

Former President Richard M. Nixon submitted a Family Assistance Plan of Welfare Reform which would have provided a minimum income, but it was killed in Congress.

Exon: National Welfare System Is A Mess

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Hershey, Pa. — "We have a national welfare mess," Nebraska Gov. J. James Exon told the National Governors' Conference Monday.

He joined his colleagues who appeared to be leaning toward adoption Tuesday of a comprehensive welfare reform statement, which proposes a national minimum income with regional variation.

Two years in the making, the measure is "not perfect," Exon said, but he called it the "best ever" produced by the conference. Whether or not the solutions offered will work, the welfare system "couldn't be any worse than it is now," he said.

Exon said later in an interview that he supports the welfare reform package and federal takeover mainly to achieve a more equitable treatment of recipients on a uniform basis.

Although Exon acknowledged the federal government probably can't operate a revised system more cheaply than under current provisions, he said it could function at about the same cost while wiping out the current disastrous misuse of tax funds.

He said that when an unemployed person qualifies for food stamps, for example, a "kick-in" factor automatically allows eligibility for Medicaid, whether it's needed or not.

Three years ago, Exon and the other Democratic governors will meet in a private session with former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, expected to win the Democratic presidential nomination next week. Republican contenders Ronald Reagan and President Ford aren't scheduled to show up in Hershey, a conference official said.

Coincidentally, Exon predicted a year ago that Democrats would pick a governor or former governor in 1976. Speculation about Carter's vice presidential considerations is widespread among the governors, but most — including Exon — disclaim any inside knowledge.

Exon said in an interview he likes Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota, noting that Carter probably will pick from the congressional rather than gubernatorial ranks to satisfy needed assets such as foreign policy experience.

Exon also noted he supports Tennessee Gov. Ray Blanton's proposal to form a Cabinet-level U.S. Tourism Department. Asked if that would offer more benefits to other states with more attractions, Exon said Nebraska as a "bridge" to Colorado, for instance, could reap advantages.

Aside from the welfare issue, the conference has been less political than pleasure-filled. Exon, his family and executive staff joined other governors in putting predicted state fiscal crunches out of mind, opting for camaraderie, a sumptuous picnic, and Fourth of July fireworks at the elegant Hotel Hershey, a conference official said.

Exon said later in an interview that he supports the welfare reform package and federal takeover mainly to achieve a more equitable treatment of recipients on a uniform basis.

Miss Vacant Lot Stuffed Big Top With Poptops

Victoria, Tex. (UPI) — Beautiful Linda Strelczyk stuffed her size 36 EEE bikini bra while singing a song entitled "Keep Your Finger Out of It; It Don't Belong to You" to win the title of Miss Vacant Lot during the weekend.

Mrs. Strelczyk, a 5-foot-5, 215-pounder, also shared first-place honors in the Fat Is Beautiful Contest at the two-day Armadillo Confab and Exposition.

The annual festival in this south Texas community also featured armadillo races, a jalapeno gobble, a Best All Around Person in the World Contest, the Great Greased Body Slide, a belch-off and a beer can smash where contestants see who can crush a can the flattest with a large wooden mallet.

Mrs. Strelczyk, 33, who says her ambition is to be a beautiful alcoholic, shared the fat is beautiful title with Judy Lynn Borgaard, 23, a 5-foot-7, 297-pound former go-go dancer who says she likes being fat because her husband doesn't have any trouble finding her in a crowd.

Mrs. Strelczyk was runner-up in last year's Miss Vacant Lot title but lost to a contestant who won the prize by stuffing 300 pennies in her mouth.

Ford Sees Drift Into Conformity

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — President Ford, winding up his part in the nation's Fourth of July celebration, told 105 new U.S. citizens Monday there is "something wonderful about being an American."

But he said he senses a dangerous drift in the country toward conformity in thought, taste and behavior.

In America's third century, "We need more encouragement and protection for individuality," Ford said.

He spoke at a naturalization ceremony on the front lawn of Thomas Jefferson's historic home, Monticello, near Charlottesville.

More than 5,000 persons attended the ceremony in which persons from 23 countries became U.S. citizens. The oath was administered by Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell.

For Ford, it ended five straight days of ceremonies honoring the nation's 200th birthday on July 4.

He will continue the Bicentennial celebration on Wednesday and Thursday when Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain will be in Washington to pay tribute to England's former colony.

He said those being naturalized "have given us a birthday present beyond price — yourselves, your faith, your loyalty and your love."

"You came as strangers among us and you leave here citizens, equal in fundamental rights, equal before the law, with an equal share in the promise of the future."

master," the President said.

"After two centuries there is still something wonderful about being an American," he stated. "If we cannot quite express it we know what it is — you know what it is or you would not be here."

To be sure, Ford said, the nation has shortcomings. Even the Founding Fathers "had stubborn blindspots in their lofty vision" in the treatment of blacks and women, he said.

Today, Ford said, "I see a growing danger to this country in conformity of thought and taste and behavior."

"But the wealth we have of cultural, ethnic, religious and racial traditions are valuable counterbalances to the overpowering sameness and subordination of totalitarian societies," the President declared.

"The sense of belonging to any group that stands for something decent and noble, so long as it does not confine free spirits or cultivate hostility to others, is part of the pride every American should have in the heritage of his past," he added.

He said those being naturalized "have given us a birthday present beyond price — yourselves, your faith, your loyalty and your love."

"Men may be trusted, he said, to govern themselves without a

There's No 007 Mystery

New York — There was a security lookout for a one-man submarine during the Operation Sail and International Naval Review operations in New York harbor. Monday it all appeared to have grown out of a hunt for a deadbeat, rather than for some James Bond mystery saboteur. In South Thomaston, Maine, George Kittredge, a retired Navy captain, suggested it might all stem from his efforts to get a Walton, Mass., man to pay for a recreation submarine bought last July for $7,000 but with more than half the bill owed.

Way To Fund Welfare Suggested

Washington — The Committee for Economic Development, an organization of business leaders who study and issue reports on national problems, recommends that general revenue-sharing funds be cut off and that the money be used to pay the full cost of welfare programs.

'Silent Generation' Moves In

Madrid — With the appointment of 43-year-old Adolfo Suarez Gonzalez, who was sworn in Monday as premier, the "silent generation" assumes command in Spain. When the Civil War ended in 1939, beginning 36 years of dictatorial rule by Generalissimo Francisco Franco, Suarez was not yet 7 years old and King Juan Carlos, who appointed him Saturday, was just over a year old.

Oh, Say, Can You Sing?

New York — Oh, say, can you sing "The Star-Spangled Banner"? On the bicentennial weekend, as never before, its words should have been on millions of American lips. Instead, there seem to be a lot of humming. Forty-five years after Congress adopted the song as the national anthem, fewer and fewer citizens seem to be singing it.

Brazil Steel To Expand

Rio de Janeiro — Brazil is embarked on one of the most ambitious steel expansion programs in the developing world. By 1980, the military government expects to double the country's present steelmaking capacity of about 9 million tons a year.

Upperclassmen Off Limits

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — They won't be able to date upperclassmen, go on overnight cruises or try out for football. But 80 women report Tuesday to the U.S. Naval Academy, ending the school's 131-year all-male tradition.

Academy officials say the female members of the Class of 1980 will be treated the same as the 1,320 male freshmen, or "plebes," living in the same dorms and undergoing the same training.

The women — who will be called midshipmen — will not be allowed to kiss or hold hands with their male counterparts in public and may not date upperclassmen. Pregnancy will bring immediate dismissal.

"There will be three women in each company, and they'll be on the ends of the rows of rooms occupied by their male counterparts in public and may not date upperclassmen. Pregnancy will bring immediate dismissal.

Queen Asks For Clemency

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II has appealed for clemency on behalf of three British mercenaries sentenced to death by a court in Angola, Buckingham Palace announced Monday.

A palace spokesman said the queen sent her message over the weekend to Angolan President Agostinho Neto from the royal yacht Britannia, on which the queen was sailing from Bermuda to the United States.

The British mercenaries sentenced to death June 28 for their part in the Angolan civil war are Costas Georgiou, 25, known as "Col. Callan;" Andrew McKenzie, and John Barker.

The fourth man sentenced to die is Daniel Gearheart, 34, an American Vietnam war veteran from Kensington, Md.

Sudan Accuses Libya Of 'Armed Banditry' In Backing Coup

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Sudan accused Libya on Monday of "an act of armed banditry" in supporting an abortive coup against the Sudanese government last week.

In Libya the official Arab Revolution News Agency denied any connection "with the internal problems of any country," and said the accusations by Sudan are covered by that statement.

Sudan's U.N. ambassador, Mustafa Medani, made the charge in a letter asking for an urgent meeting of the Security Council on Libya's "grave act of aggression."

Council sources said the question would probably be taken up this week.

In Libya the official Arab Revolution News Agency denied any connection "with the internal problems of any country," and said the accusations by

Sudan are covered by that statement.

It has "become conventional to attribute the causes of any popular uprising or attempted coup to Libya instead of looking for the reasons within the regimes," the news agency said.

Sudan on Sunday recalled its ambassador from Libya and filed an official complaint with the Arab League in Cairo. Sudanese President Jaafar el-Numairi accused Libyan strongman Col. Moammar

Khadafi of responsibility for an attempted coup that Numairi's troops put down in bloody fighting.

In his letter Medani said the fighting caused "substantial losses of life and property damages of $3 million." Reports from Sudan had placed the death toll at some 600.

Medani said he would give the council "massive evidence that the act of aggression has been conceived, prepared and executed by the government of the Libyan Arab Republic."

He said Libya "provided the training, arms, ammunition and vehicles of transport, to which some mercenaries arrested by Sudan have confessed."

Medani reiterated Numairi's assertion that no Sudanese military were involved in the abortive coup.

"My new furnace is gas, just like the old one. It costs less to operate and it conserves energy. What more could I ask for?"

Today, more than ever, a gas furnace is your best value—both in terms of economy of operation and energy conservation.

Sure, no one likes the increasing costs of energy, gas included. Yet, it is still true that gas is usually the most economical way to heat your home.

A gas furnace makes the most efficient use of the energy consumed. That's because gas comes to you direct, with almost all of its original energy intact. Electricity, on the other hand, must be generated usually by burning coal or oil and then it suffers a loss of power in transmission.

The point is, let each form of energy do the jobs it does best. And for economy and conservation, gas is best for heating your home. When it comes time to replace your old gas furnace, replace it with a new gas furnace.

How To Encourage Carpooling

One of the assumptions upon which a new Lincoln street plan is supposed to rest is a projection of traffic volume. And an important factor in determining future traffic volume, obviously, is occupancy — will the volume of autos on city streets be held down as motorists band together in car pools, or will the individual use of the private car continue unabated?

According to the best estimates now, every time a car moves down the street in Lincoln 1.24 people are riding in it.

Some of the proposed street plans now under consideration assume the auto occupancy figure will rise to 1.75 people per car by the year 2000. On that assumption, a less grandiose street plan can be adopted than if a lower auto occupancy figure is assumed. But in assuming the higher figure, it is also assumed that people are going to change their habits. Carpooling is going to have to catch on.

Many people — including business interests in Lincoln who favor a more elaborate street plan for a number of reasons — argue that it is unrealistic and futile to base traffic projections on a high auto occupancy figure. And many people who may favor a less ambitious street plan are inclined to agree.

One panel involved in the street planning process, the Technical Committee, looked at the problem and concluded recently that "based on the experience of other cities in the midwest, no methods have been found to effectively increase carpooling."

With proper encouragement, we think it is possible to increase auto occupancy somewhat, at least among isolated groups of motorists.

In an Omaha experiment, carpooling increased by ten percent in the past year. In Lincoln, pay parking for employees at the County-City Building has been suggested to spur bus ridership or carpooling.

The Politics

Politics can't keep out of the sports arena and sports can't help but be political, it seems.

The absolute worst example of political expression invading athletic competition was the massacre of Israelis at Munich. It is profoundly hoped that such an atrocity never happens again.

But world athletic competition is being slowly killed in less lethal ways.

"Take the brazen Soviet habit of entering their professional athletes in amateur competition. Only the Russians and their clients are unembarrassed over such a travesty. It is political expression because the Soviets believe that Communist gold medals prove that capitalism is

JAMES RESTON

What 'Superpowers'?

WASHINGTON — In the last few weeks, the two so-called superpowers of the world — the United States and the Soviet Union — have been compelled to recognize just how seriously their political influence has declined since the beginning of the nuclear era.

The European Communist Parties, meeting in East Berlin, have told the Soviet government quite explicitly that their policies will no longer be made in Moscow. They will co-operate with the USSR "voluntarily," they said, but only in accordance with the "principles of equality and sovereign independence of each party, non-interference in internal affairs and respect for their free choice of different roads in the struggle for social change..."

This is quite a change from the days when Leopold Brezhnev asserted the right to intervene militarily in any Eastern European communist state that seemed to be threatened by non-communist political forces. It may not rank historically with China's or Yugoslavia's earlier challenges to Moscow's control, but it is clearly another important step in the decentralization of the world communist movement.

Meanwhile, the United States has been forced to recognize the limitations on its own political influence abroad. It was not able to dominate events in the Lebanon crisis as it had in the Eisenhower years. In fact, it was not even able to save the life of its own ambassador during the recent fighting in that country, and had trouble evacuating its own citizens from Beirut.

It does not follow from this, however, that the policies of co-existence followed, however unevenly, by both Washington and Moscow for over a decade, have been a failure. On the contrary, the more they have succeeded in relieving the fears of a third world war, the more their allies have tended to insist on independent policies of their own.

KEVIN P.
PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON — If Jimmy Carter should ever want to write a children's book instead of posing with freckle-faced eight-year-olds for campaign photos, he was a natural title: "The Peanut That Swallowed the Elephant."

This would be an ironic put-down of Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz who keeps promising the Republicans victory in November because "Everybody knows elephants eat peanuts." Probably not this year, Earl.

My own guess is that the Grand Old Party is not far from that great pachyderm graveyard. Pandits who cite the elephant's recuperative powers may not realize what the poor beast has been through. Sure, 1964 was rough, yet the elephant recovered. But beneath the debris of Goldwaterism, there was a real and justified current of optimism. Dixie was opening the door to realignment. Both before and after 1964, there was little new-party talk.

Today, new party talk is widespread, partly because only one Republican in ten cherishes any hope of the GOP's profiting from future realignment. There is none of the optimism that characterized 1965-68.

Most planning — government or family or individual — is not rationally done with the wildest or most extravagant appetites of people in mind. Plans are made with an eye toward priorities and within the limits of available resources.

If Lincoln officials decide for the community that we should have a more modest street system than motorists have been used to during the glory days of the automobile binge — because we can neither afford a more ambitious street system nor would we want to develop one at the expense of other priorities — then motorists are going to have to learn to be patient or find other modes of transportation or double up in the use of a car.

Simply put, extravagant motoring habits should not be the key factor in building a street system.

Too many people forget these circumstances. In state after state, especially in the South and Southwest, the years of the mid-to-late 60's saw substantial GOP gains in voter registration as well as in federal and state elected officials. I remember the surge of expectation when New Jersey and Virginia both went solidly Republican in the only two 1968 gubernatorial elections. Even 1970 was not bad — a gain of two senators and the minimal sort of ten-seat House loss that had always previously signaled (and did once again) a major success for the incumbent White House party in the next presidential election.

Actually, if Watergate hadn't mushroomed, the odds were good that the Republican Party, or at least the Nixon administration, would have consolidated itself enormously during the 1973-77 period. Those disagreeing will say: Ah, but remember that despite Nixon's landslide in 1972, people split their votes, so that the Democrats lost only 12 House seats and gained two in the Senate. To which my reply is: Yes, but Watergate had an awful lot to do with that. As Woodward and Bernstein readers will remember, Watergate was a major fear and distraction to the Nixon high command during much of the 1972 campaign, especially in October, when accusations against the White House were coming hot and heavy.

Did this affect the 1972 outcome? You better believe it! There was little autumn White House campaigning, no tactical business whatsoever and scarcely any attempt to turn the McGovern-led Democrats' ideological vulnerability into larger party repudiation. Over a hundred White House free-ride deals were cut with individual Democratic congressmen (partly to head off fall 1972 congressional Watergate investigations). Then in late October, as Watergate revelations grew, no did public disgust. Pollsters (correctly) reported that indicated voter turnout was slumping by seven million in the last 10 days. Many of these people were alienated Republicans and independents, mostly in the North.

Without this multiple Watergate impact, the GOP would probably have gained 20 to 30 House seats plus one or two Senate seats. That would have been close enough to a congressional majority to trigger the many tentative deals with Southern Democrats. Then, under the leadership of Democrats-for-Nixon chief John Connally, that deal would have spread across the South and into parts of the ethnic North, backed by the full, increasingly authoritarian thrust of Richard Nixon's high-riding "Imperial Presidency" and the maximized programmatic and fiscal clout of the federal government.

Instead, Watergate destroyed this probability and left the GOP elephant enfeebled and tottering. Today, to recall how the Nixon GOP could have cemented its power in 1972 is as difficult as weary Confederates, in their last hours, remembering how, if only Jeb Stuart's cavalry had arrived in time, Robert E. Lee might very well have won at Gettysburg and changed everything.

WASHINGTON — Under the spur of public opinion, Congress grudgingly approved a law in December, 1967, barring any more relatives from the congressional payroll.

But a number of senators and congressmen have gotten around the law by placing one another's relatives on the payroll. This form of nepotism is practiced in the best of families.

Our associates Jack Cloberty and Bob Owens found dozens of famous names on the public payroll — the wives, children, uncles, cousins and in-laws of prominent legislators.

A few congressional relatives were holdovers, who had obtained their jobs before the 1967 law and, therefore, weren't affected by it. But most were hired by congressmen who were not their kin but who understood the ancient rules of political backscratching. This resulted in some fancy payroll juggling, which violated the spirit if not the letter of the anti-nepotism law.

—Sen. Hiram Fong, R-Hawaii, is a millionaire with ample funds to take care of his family. Yet he put his brother, Herman, on the congressional payroll at a generous $34,000 a year. Since Herman was hired before December, 1967, he can go on collecting from the taxpayers.

—Sen. Milton Young, R-N.D., married his executive secretary.

It is perfectly legal, therefore, for her to remain on the senator's payroll. But after their marriage, he quietly gave her a generous raise. Her $20,000 annual salary helps to bolster the family finances.

—Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., married a member of his committee staff. She is still pulling down $27,000 a year to supplement the family income.

—Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, arranged a job for his niece in the Senate folding room last summer and as a Senate elevator operator this summer. He has also planted his daughter on the Senate payroll as a page. Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., also wangled a summer job for his son. Other senators like Gale McGee, D-Wyo., and Frank Moss, D-Utah, have found temporary employment for their kids on Capitol Hill.

Nepotism Flourishing In Congress

JIM

NEW YORK — Forty years ago, Dick Hyman paused to listen to a judge in Jasper, Ala. The judge said that "since the Alabama husband is accountable for his wife's misbehavior, he has the legal right to chastise her with a stick no larger than the thumb."

No one in Lawrence, Kan., is permitted to walk the streets with bees in his hat. Fairbanks, Alaska, forbids anyone from disturbing a grizzly bear to take its picture. It's a violation of the city code for a tenant in Ramseur, N.C., to bite his landlord.

Hyman was a New York reporter. He returned to the Big Apple determined to devote his life to locating nutty laws. He has written newspaper columns, magazine articles and books about loony legalities.

He has now published 600 of the weird in a book called "The Trenton Pickle Ordinance and Other Beachhead Legislation." Have a few samples, and bear in mind these are ordinances:

In Alaska it's against the law to look at a moose from an airplane. It's against the law in Florida to molest an alligator. In Indiana, a driver can be given a breath test against his will because the legislature reasons that "after the breath leaves the body it comes to be the property of the person from whom it came."

It is against the law for a baby-sitter in Altoona, Pa., to clean out an employer's refrigerator. You may not back a car in Glendale, Calif. You can be fined in Georgia for stopping a man on the back.

Barbers in Waterloo, Ia., are forbidden by law to eat onions between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. In Baton Rouge, La., a bill has been introduced fixing a 25-cent ceiling on haircuts for bald men.

Kentucky state law is blunt on this question: Every citizen must take a bath at least once a year. If you steal a cake of soap in Mojave County, Ariz., a policeman will stand by as you wash yourself with the soap until it is used up.

No one in Lawrence, Kan., is permitted to walk the streets with bees in his hat. Fairbanks, Alaska, forbids anyone from disturbing a grizzly bear to take its picture. It's a violation of the city code for a tenant in Ramseur, N.C., to bite his landlord.

In Utah, birds have the right to way on highways. Virginia has a campaign statute: "To prohibit corrupt practices or bribery by any person other than candidates." In Texas, women who adorn calendars in saloons must be decently clad.

How To Encourage Carpooling

One of the assumptions upon which a new Lincoln street plan is supposed to rest is a projection of traffic volume. And an important factor in determining future traffic volume, obviously, is occupancy — will the volume of autos on city streets be held down as motorists band together in car pools, or will the individual use of the private car continue unabated?

According to the best estimates now, every time a car moves down the street in Lincoln 1.24 people are riding in it.

Some of the proposed street plans now under consideration assume the auto occupancy figure will rise to 1.75 people per car by the year 2000. On that assumption, a less grandiose street plan can be adopted than if a lower auto occupancy figure is assumed. But in assuming the higher figure, it is also assumed that people are going to change their habits. Carpooling is going to have to catch on.

Many people — including business interests in Lincoln who favor a more elaborate street plan for a number of reasons — argue that it is unrealistic and futile to base traffic projections on a high auto occupancy figure. And many people who may favor a less ambitious street plan are inclined to agree.

One panel involved in the street planning process, the Technical Committee, looked at the problem and concluded recently that "based on the experience of other cities in the midwest, no methods have been found to effectively increase carpooling."

With proper encouragement, we think it is possible to increase auto occupancy somewhat, at least among isolated groups of motorists.

In an Omaha experiment, carpooling increased by ten percent in the past year. In Lincoln, pay parking for employees at the County-City Building has been suggested to spur bus ridership or carpooling.

The Politics Of Winning

Politics can't keep out of the sports arena and sports can't help but be political, it seems.

The absolute worst example of political expression invading athletic competition was the massacre of Israelis at Munich. It is profoundly hoped that such an atrocity never happens again.

But world athletic competition is being slowly killed in less lethal ways.

Take the brazen Soviet habit of entering their professional athletes in amateur competition. Only the Russians and their clients are unembarrassed over such a travesty. It is political expression because the Soviets believe that Communist gold medals prove that capitalism is

What 'Superpowers'?

WASHINGTON — In the last few weeks, the two so-called superpowers of the world — the United States and the Soviet Union — have been compelled to recognize just how seriously their political influence has declined since the beginning of the nuclear era.

The European Communist Parties, meeting in East Berlin, have told the Soviet government quite explicitly that their policies will no longer be made in Moscow. They will co-operate with the USSR "voluntarily," they said, but only in accordance with the "principles of equality and sovereign independence of each party, non-interference in internal affairs and respect for their free choice of different roads in the struggle for social change . . ."

This is quite a change from the days when Leonid Brezhnev asserted the right to intervene militarily in any Eastern European communist state that seemed to be threatened by non-communist political forces. It may not rank historically with China's or Yugoslavia's earlier challenges to Moscow's control, but it is clearly another important step in the decentralization of the world communist movement.

Meanwhile, the United States has been forced to recognize the limitations on its own political influence abroad. It was not able to dominate events in the Lebanon crisis as it had in the Eisenhower years. In fact, it was not even able to save the life of its own ambassador during the recent fighting in that country, and had trouble evacuating its own citizens from Beirut.

It does not follow from this, however, that the policies of co-existence followed, however unevenly, by both Washington and Moscow for over a decade, have been a failure. On the contrary, the more they have succeeded in relieving the fears of a third world war, the more their allies have tended to insist on independent policies of their own.

RECIPROCAL INSANITY

KEVIN P.
PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON — If Jimmy Carter should ever want to write a children's book instead of posing with freckle-faced eight-year-olds for campaign photos, he was a natural title: "The Peanut That Swallowed the Elephant."

This would be an ironic put-down of Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz who keeps promising the Republicans victory in November because "Everybody knows elephants eat peanuts." Probably not this year, Earl.

My own guess is that the Grand Old Party is not far from that great pachyderm graveyard. Pundits who cite the elephant's recuperative powers may not realize what the poor beast has been through. Sure, 1964 was rough, yet the elephant recovered. But beneath the debris of Goldwaterism, there was a real and justified current of optimism. Dixie was opening the door to realignment. Both before and after 1964, there was little new-party talk.

Today, new party talk is widespread, partly because only one Republican in ten cherishes any hope of the GOP's profiting from future realignment. There is none of the optimism that characterized 1965-68.

Too many people forget these circumstances. In state after state, especially in the South and Southwest, the years of the mid-to-late 60's saw substantial GOP gains in voter registration as well as in federal and state elected officials. I remember the surge of expectation when New Jersey and Virginia both went solidly Republican in the only two 1969 gubernatorial elections. Even 1970 was not bad — a gain of two senators and the minimal sort of ten-seat House loss that had always previously signaled (and did once again) a major success for the incumbent White House party in the next presidential election.

Actually, if Watergate hadn't mushroomed, the odds were good that the Republican Party, or at least the Nixon administration, would have consolidated itself enormously during the 1973-77 period. Those disagreeing will say: Ah, but remember that despite Nixon's landslide in 1972, people split their votes, so that the Democrats lost only 12 House seats and gained two in the Senate. To which my reply is: Yes, but Watergate had an awful lot to do with that. As Woodward and Bernstein readers will remember, Watergate was a major fear and distraction to the Nixon high command during much of the 1972 campaign, especially in October, when accusations against the White House were coming hot and heavy.

Did this affect the 1972 outcome? You better believe it! There was little autumn White House campaigning, no tactical boldness whatsoever and scarcely any attempt to turn the McGovern-led Democrats' ideological vulnerability into larger party repudiation. Over a hundred White House free-ride deals were cut with individual Democratic congressmen (partly to head off fall 1972 congressional Watergate investigations). Then in late October, as Watergate revelations grew, so did public disgust. Pollsters (correctly) reported that indicated voter turnout was slumping by seven million in the last 10 days. Many of these people were alienated Republicans and independents, mostly in the North.

Without this multiple Watergate impact, the GOP would probably have gained 20 to 30 House seats plus one or two Senate seats. That would have been close enough to a congressional majority to trigger many tentative deals with Southern Democrats. Then, under the leadership of Democrats-for-Nixon chief John Connally, that deal would have spread across the South and into parts of the ethnic North, backed by the full, increasingly authoritarian thrust of Richard Nixon's high-riding "Imperial Presidency" and the maximized programmatic and fiscal clout of the federal government.

Instead, Watergate destroyed this probability and left the GOP elephant enfeebled and tottering. Today, to recall how the Nixon GOP could have cemented its power in 1972-73 is as difficult as weary Confederates in their last hours, remembering how, if only Jeb Stuart's cavalry had arrived in time, Robert E. Lee might very well have won at Gettysburg and changed everything.

Nepotism Flourishing In Congress

JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Under the spur of public opinion, Congress grudgingly approved a law in December, 1967, barring any more relatives from the congressional payroll.

But a number of senators and congressmen have gotten around the law by placing one another's relatives on the payroll. This form of nepotism is practiced in the best of families.

Our associates Jack Cloherty and Bob Owens found dozens of famous names on the public payroll — the wives, children, uncles, cousins and in-laws of prominent legislators.

A few congressional relatives were holdovers, who had obtained their jobs before the 1967 law and, therefore, weren't affected by it. But most were hired by congressmen who were not their kin but who understood the ancient rules of political backscratching. This resulted in some fancy payroll juggling, which violated the spirit if not the letter of the anti-nepotism law.

—Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, formerly made a switch with ex-Sen. Marlow Cook, R-Ky. Cook hired Stevens' kids to work in his office, and Stevens put Cook's children on his patronage. Now Stevens has given the daughter of Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., a job on the Senate Republican Campaign Committee. She works on Capitol Hill but is paid out of campaign funds.

—Sen. Milton Young, R-N.D., married his executive secretary. It is perfectly legal, therefore, for her to remain on the senator's payroll. But after their marriage, he quietly gave her a generous raise. Her $20,000 annual salary helps to bolster the family finances.

—Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., married a member of his committee staff. She is still pulling down $27,000 a year to outlast nepotism. Those who hire supplement the family income.

—Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, arranged a job for his niece in the Senate folding room last summer and as a Senate elevator operator this summer. He has also planted his daughter on the Senate payroll as a page. Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., also wangled a summer job for his son. Other senators like Gale McGee, D-Wyo., and Frank Moss, D-Utah, have found temporary employment for their kids on Capitol Hill.

None of these men has violated the 1967 law. All contend that their relatives work hard for the salaries they collect. But the law was written to outlaw nepotism. Those who hire one another's relatives don't let go of a government pay envelope easily.

Footnote: Most members of Congress who make their way into this column appear to be villains in the drama of government. It is necessary for us to remind our readers occasionally that the scalawags attract more attention than the conscientious congressmen.

For that matter, the sellout one day may be the holdout the next. Even the worst rascals on Capitol Hill have their moments of righteousness. Meanwhile, the good are sometimes damned along with the bad. Honest men in public life, who have made great personal sacrifices to serve the nation, can suffer from guilt by association.

Lots Of Loony Legalities

BISHOP

NEW YORK — Forty years ago, Dick Hyman paused to listen to a judge in Jasper, Ala. The judge said that "since the Alabama husband is accountable for his wife's misbehavior, he has the legal right to chastise her with a stick no larger than the thumb."

Hyman was a New York reporter. He returned to the Big Apple determined to devote his life to locating nutty laws. He has written newspaper columns, magazine articles and books about loony legalities.

He has now published 600 of the weirdness in a book called "The Trenton Pickle Ordinance and Other Bonehead Legislation." Have a few samples, and bear in mind these are ordinances:

In Alaska it's against the law to look at a moose from an airplane. It's against the law in Florida to molest an alligator. In Indiana, a driver can be given a breath test against his will because the legislature reasons that "after the breath leaves the body it ceases to be the property of the person from whom it came."

It is against the law for a baby-sitter in Altoona, Pa., to clean out an employer's refrigerator. You may not back a car in Glendale, Calif. You can be fined in Georgia for slapping a man on the back.

Barbers in Waterloo, Ia., are forbidden by law to eat onions between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. in Baton Rouge, La., a bill has been introduced fixing a 25-cent ceiling on haircuts for bald men.

Kentucky state law is blunt on this question: Every citizen must take a bath at least once a year. If you steal a cake of soap in Mojave County, Ariz., a policeman will stand by as you wash yourself with the soap until it is used up.

No one in Lawrence, Kans., is permitted to walk the streets with bees in his hair. Fairbanks, Alaska, forbids anyone from disturbing a grizzly bear to take its picture. It's a violation of the city code for a tenant in Rumford, Me., to bite his landlord.

In Utah, birds have the right to way on highways. Virginia has a campaign statute: "To prohibit corrupt practices or bribery by any person other than candidates." In Texas, women who adorn calendars in saloons must be decently clad.

Sterling, Colo., warns that it is a violation of law to permit your cat to run loose without a tail-light. A rooster who wants to crow in Kenilworth, Ill., must first step back 300 paces from any residence.

In Boston it is forbidden to put tomatoes in clam chowder. Colorado statutes proclaim: "No maternity hospital shall receive an infant without its mother, except in cases of emergency." It is against the law in Seattle to carry a concealed weapon over six-feet long.

Iowa passed a law many years ago stating that women are not allowed to wear corsets. The men of the state were appointed corset inspectors, and were permitted to poke strange ladies in the ribs.

No woman in Kentucky is permitted to marry the same man four times. Girls in Whitesville, Del., are forbidden to propose marriage in leap year. In Michigan, if a man's wife leaves him, he may follow her down the street removing articles of her clothing one by one — they are his property.

You are subject to a fine in Hammond, Ind., for missing a spitoon from any angle. In Monroe, Utah, couples who dance must make certain that there is plenty of light between their bodies. You cannot call a doctor in Ohio a horse doctor, even if he is a horse doctor.

In the same state it is "contributory negligence" for any person to walk behind a male without speaking to the animal first.

It's the law . . .

Frogs are prohibited by law from croaking in Memphis after 11 p.m. No one is allowed to plant vegetables in a California cemetery. A woman of Owingsboro, Ky., is forbidden to purchase a hat unless her husband tries it on first.

Overdue Ticket Brings Trouble

DANVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Allen Trickle was released Monday night from the Vermilion County Jail after being held nearly 12 hours on a charge of failure to pay court fees stemming from a 50-cent parking ticket.

Trickle, 20, was released on personal recognizance bond, which does not require the posting of cash, after his wife, Lynda, 27, telephoned the judge who had signed the arrest warrant.

Earlier, Trickle had told deputies he would not pay a $25 bond for his release because he felt it was unfair.

Trickle was arrested in his home Monday morning on a charge of failure to pay a 5¢ fee for the serving of a summons on him. He got the summons in December because he had not paid a 50-cent overtime parking ticket in the nearby town of Hooperston.

It took a telephone call from the judge to the sheriff's office to release Trickle on personal recognizance because the Circuit Court has a rule against releasing prisoners on such bond before they have appeared at a hearing.

Judge Paul Wright, who made the rule, said it was designed for felony cases. "It certainly was not made to apply to cases like this," he said.

Mrs. Trickle said she paid 5¢ for the overtime parking violation plus court costs when the summons was served in December. She said in a telephone interview she never received a bill for the summons fee.

Before leaving with her husband, she said, the sheriff's deputy told her they now must pay another 5¢ fee for the serving of the arrest warrant plus a $1.20 mileage fee.

Bond on the charge is $25. But Lt. Leon Thomason of the Vermilion County sheriff's police said Trickle did not want to be bailed out.

Asked why Trickle was arrested on a holiday, Thomason said, "We arrest them anytime we can catch them."

The sheriff and Hooperston City Atty. Richard Janov were not available for comment.

"How much are we supposed to pay?" Mrs. Trickle said. "We moved last July and we let the 50-cent ticket go by. I don't remember getting any bill to pay the summons fee, and I don't remember getting any reminders to pay the parking ticket."

The arrest warrant was issued by Judge Lawrence Allen of Circuit Court at Janov's request. Trickle got the ticket in April 1973 while visiting an attorney to discuss the purchase of his home.

Explosives Found In Man's Apartment

BOSTON (AP) — Blasting caps, timing devices, 125 sticks of dynamite and a sawed-off shotgun were found in the Portland, Maine, apartment and the car of a man arrested near here on explosives charges, the FBI said Monday.

The U.S. Consul at Belém said the elder Davis originally came to Brazil to do missionary work and "his project was always closely connected with the missionaries."

But he said Davis was not doing full-time missionary work at the time of the shooting.

Local newspaper reports said the situation worsened recently when the Davis family put up a barbed wire fence across what the settlers said was a public road, cutting off their access to a town and school.

The senior Davis was listed in newly opened territory.

Police said the Brazilians stopped the Davis car in what appeared to be a friendly manner. When the family and guards got out of the car to talk, the men pulled guns and opened fire.

"They had no chance," said sources close to the investigation.

Police said the shooting was the culmination of a long, seething dispute between Davis,

The senior Davis was listed in newly opened territory.

During the past two years the Davis family and the settlers have repeatedly gone to the police to lodge complaints against each other and the argument led both sides to arm themselves. Davis began traveling with bodyguards.

Brazilian Justice Minister Armando Falcao sent assurances to American Ambassador John Crimmins that a full investigation of the killings would be undertaken.

The U.S. Consul at Belém said the elder Davis originally came to Brazil to do missionary work and "his project was always closely connected with the missionaries."

But he said Davis was not doing full-time missionary work at the time of the shooting.

Local newspaper reports said the situation worsened recently when the Davis family put up a barbed wire fence across what the settlers said was a public road, cutting off their access to a town and school.

Overdue Ticket Brings Trouble

DANVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Allen Trickle was released Monday night from the Vermilion County Jail after being held nearly 12 hours on a charge of failure to pay court fees stemming from a 50-cent parking ticket.

Trickle, 30, was released on personal recognition bond, which does not require the posting of cash, after his wife, Lynda, 27, telephoned the judge who had signed the arrest warrant.

Earlier, Trickle had told deputies he would not pay a $25 bond for his release because he felt it was unfair.

Trickle was arrested in his home Monday morning on a charge of failure to pay a $7 fee for the serving of a summons on him. He got the summons in December because he had not paid a 50-cent overtime parking ticket in the nearby town of Hooperston.

It took a telephone call from the judge to the sheriff's office to release Trickle on personal recognition because the Circuit Court has a rule against releasing prisoners on such bond before they have appeared at a hearing.

Judge Paul Wright, who made the rule, said it was designed for felony cases. "It certainly was not made to apply to cases like this," he said.

Mrs. Trickle said she paid $7 for the overtime parking violation plus court costs when the summons was served in December. She said in a telephone interview she never received a bill for the summons fee.

Before leaving with her husband, she said, the sheriff's deputy told her they now may pay another $7 fee for the serving of the arrest warrant plus a $1.20 mileage fee.

Bond on the charge is $25. But Lt. Leon Thomason of the Vermilion County sheriff's police said Trickle did not want to be bailed out.

Asked why Trickle was arrested on a holiday, Thomason said, "We arrest them anytime we can catch them."

The sheriff and Hooperston City Atty. Richard Janov were not available for comment.

"How much are we supposed to pay?" Mrs. Trickle said. "We moved last July and we let the 50-cent ticket go by. I don't remember getting any bill to pay the summons fee, and I don't remember getting any reminders to pay the parking ticket."

The arrest warrant was issued by Judge Lawrence Allen of Circuit Court at Janov's request. Trickle got the ticket in April 1975 while visiting an attorney to discuss the purchase of his home.

The shooting took place on the Davis' 300,000-acre lumber ranch about 150 miles south of Belem in newly opened territory.

Police said the Brazilians stopped the Davis car in what appeared to be a friendly manner. When the family and guards got out of the car to talk, the men pulled guns and opened fire.

"They had no chance," said sources close to the investigation.

Police said the shooting was the culmination of a long seething dispute between Davis, who came to the Amazon area eight years ago, and settlers who set up homes and farms in 1974 on what Davis claimed was his land.

Explosives Found In Man's Apartment

BOSTON (AP) — Blasting caps, timing devices, 12 sticks of dynamite and a sawed-off shotgun were found in the Portland, Maine, apartment and the car of a man arrested near here on explosives charges, the FBI said Monday.

The FBI refused to either connect or rule out a connection between the latest explosion and earlier blasts at three courthouses in Massachusetts, a post office in New Hampshire and a power company control room in Maine.

Massachusetts on Sunday before his car ran off the roadway and crashed near Topsfield.

He was picked up hitchhiking in nearby Danvers, and police seized 46 sticks of dynamite, firearms and timing devices from his car several hours later.

Warrants charging transportation of explosives were issued for Aceto and Richard J. Picariello, 27. Police continued to search for Picariello and an unidentified man, for whom a "John Doe" warrant was issued.

In Portland on Sunday night, agents arrested Everett C. Carlson, 38, also charged with transportation of explosives.

Both Aceto and Carlson were scheduled for arraignment Tuesday.

The FBI in Portland said seizures from Aceto's and Carlson's homes included documents mentioning the Fred Hampton Unit of People's Forces, a group which claimed responsibility for the August utility bombing and which authorities have said they know little about, including its size or composition.

Another group, calling itself both the Boston Defense League and the South Boston Defense League, has claimed responsibility for several explosions in Massachusetts. The Samuel Melville-Jonathan Jackson Unit said it set blasts at courthouses in Boston and suburban Lowell to protest prison conditions.

Police say they know little about either group. West Coast authorities have identified the Melville-Jackson unit as part of the terrorist New World Liberation Front.

The FBI said it had no information of any person or group claiming responsibility for the latest bombing in Revere.

Mother Country Giped As 51st State Candidate

LONDON (AP) — Britain's respected Economist magazine, its stiff upper lip twitching with a hint of laughter, published Monday a "declaration of dependence" proposing that Britain become the 51st State of the Union.

In a paraphrase of Thomas Jefferson's 1776 document, the usually staid economics and current affairs journal catalogued the sins of the British government:

"They have erected a multitude of new offices and sent out swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance . . ."

"They have reduced the value of the pound to just about 1.776 dollars, which is an excessively bicentennial figure."

The item ended with a declaration "that this island is, and of right ought to be, the fifty-first state . . . of the United States of America and Britain."

"Lest anyone in economically troubled Britain take it as a real call to rebellion, the Economist prominently subheaded the piece: "Here's an only just tongue-in-cheek document disgruntled and rebellious Britons might like to sign," and a table of contents note said, "Dear fellow Europeans, don't take us seriously, please."

Go Gentle Into The Night:*People Inclined To Pray For Everything

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of three excerpts from "Go Gentle Into The Night," a book about "uncommon prayers," by a New York Times columnist.)

By C.L. SULZBERGER

People are inclined to pray for everything and out of every motive: out of fear because they are terrified of dying or its consequence, to arouse combative spirit of martial confidence during war; out of despair, for mercy; in request of solace or of special favors, and sometimes out of sheer love, exuberance, or reverence.

Such comfort is derived from perusal of Plato's Socratic Dialogues that, even today, their tranquility and benign inspiration can serve as a substitute for more conventional types of prayer.

I remember, years ago when entering hospital for a major operation whose outcome was in some doubt, that I wanted no one, not even my wife and children or my mother to know of it. Why worry people? While there is a chance, I reasoned, this is needless.

So, confiding my whereabouts only to one trusted friend that he might be able to find me (or my doctor) if worse came to worst, I took to my bed of pain a hired record player with selected works of Bach, Vivaldi, and Albenone, and my treasured Socrates, fully assured that thus I should be well entertained and spiritually enriched while awaiting my moment in time to end — if end it then must.

It takes a courageous man to face his end, above all if it be painful, without prior preparation in the form of a prayer. Few are so wise as Epictetus, who resigned himself with sad good sense: "Do with me as thou wilt; my will is thy will, I appeal not against thy judgments."

These are the words of the philosopher, not the warrior who, with that splendid English king, Alfred, would urge: "If thou has a woe, tell it not the weaking Tell it to thy saddle-bow and ride singing forth."

A more pragmatic and modest American chaplain proposed in World War II "Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition."

The sporting military prayer addressed to God in hopes of an even break may be aptly classified as the "Don't-help-that-bear" plea, after Daniel Boone's special request of the Supreme Being: "Lord, if You can't help me, don't help that bear."

Yet the illogic of supposing God's sectarianism has long been supposed also to have strategic value. Field Marshal Prince Leopold I of Anhalt-Dessau, a burning Lutheran and brilliant Prussian general, at the field of Kasselkendorf (1745) asked only this of Heaven:

"Oh Lord God, let me not be disgraced in my old days. Or if Thou will not help me, do not let those scoundrels; but leave us to try it ourselves."

Then he proceeded to overwhelm the Catholic forces of Austria lined up before his guns.

A heartbreaking plea for love was found on the gold pendant of a girl buried at Aquincum (nowadays called Budapest), the old Roman capital of Lower Pannonia. On her treasured jewel, in Greek words, this early Danubian beauty had caused to be written: "Let them talk as much as they like. I do not care. Do love me it will serve you well."

The greatest of all Russian writers saw love in its deep truth against the full panoply of existence and, in a strange way, consequently gave to that emotion its most intensely religious description.

"Love all God's creation, both the whole and every grain of sand. Love every leaf, every ray of light. Love the animals, love the plants, love each separate thing. If thou love each thing thou wilt perceive the mystery of God in all, and when once thou perceive this, thou wilt thenceforward grow every day to a fuller understanding of it: until thou come at last to love the whole world with a love that will then be all-embracing and universal." —Feodor Dostoevski.

Love in its philosophical meaning, as a code of behavior and a way of life, was suggested by Eusebius, Bishop of Caesarea, during the early bloody days of Christianity when that new doctrine was often at war within its own disputatious self. His offering was pure, but rarely put to practice in Caesarea's quarrelsome see (even until today):

"May I be no man's enemy, and may I be the friend of that which is eternal and abides. May I never quarrel with those nearest me; and if I do, may I be reconciled quickly. May I never devise evil against any man, if any devise evil against me, may I escape uninjured and without the need of hurting him. May I love, seek, and attain only that which is good."

To conclude these prayers of and please for love, a dreadful reminder from a little Jewish girl, Anne Frank, who knew very little of it from a harsh and brutal world. May one never forget that she, before she was taken away to butchers in a Nazi concentration camp, had confided to her secret diary words of which any adult saint, poet, or philosopher could be proud.

"The best remedy for those who are afraid, lonely or unhappy is to go outside, somewhere where they can be quite along with the heavens, nature, and God. Because only then does one feel that all is as it should be and that God wishes to see people happy, amidst the simple beauty of nature. As long as this exists, and it certainly always will, I know that then there will always be comfort for every sorrow, whatever the circumstances may be."

San Francisco — Why should the stock market go up when hemlines rise? Lay Dow-Jones average and skirt side by side and you will find this is so.

When the ministrait went out, the stock market dived. Hasn't come back to this sad, and day. Encouraged by a friendly stock broker, I bought mutual funds at 9. They immediately went down to 6.

Stayed there. A little change like 6½ and then back to 6. Just to let me know the company is still breathing. Nothing to indicate that I've got it made.

I said to the children: "We're still one jump ahead of the Sheriff but the horses are wearing out."

We are in new digs. A townhouse at fashionable Sinking Inn. New kitchen equipment. The stove doesn't have burners.

The top of the stove is flat as a pool table. The place the burners would be are marked on this flat area. Turn on the heat and these places turn hot. You can cook on them.

They turn a little different color, but they don't look red hot. They are though.

"Be sure you don't put your hand on the top," I told the children. "We're sailing with success power. The gallery's the most dangerous part of this vessel."

We are in the long hot summer now. Iced beer and repeat TV shows. Baseball. Gardening — I put some new cilantro seeds in the flower pot. It's the only thing to use in bloody Marys. Cilantro leaves.

New Medicine is very big in California. Young medics work out your survival possibilities. Oh, oh.

The only people around not stressed up with moving are the cats. Cats are calm animals. Lying on the hearth, looking at you with great, golden eyes.

Therefore, "nervous as a cat" is meaningless. "Nervous as a fox in a forest fire" is possible. Though who's really seen a fox in a forest fire and measured its stress scale?

So we enter the warm days of swimming pools and picnics. ("You forgot the salt?" That must rate close to 90 on the stress scale.)

Have not been offered a better job. That takes care of that.

A READER WRITES: I read your article on Citizen Dispute Settlement with interest. But since there are about nine cities in the United States adopting this program, why weren't these cities listed? Isn't that news? Surely it should not be a secret.

COMMENT: You are right, of course. Readers around the country naturally want to know if there is a Citizen Dispute Settlement Program near them. The cities which currently have the program are: New York, N.Y.; East Cleveland, Ohio; Philadelphia, Pa.; Orlando, Miami, and Jacksonville, Fla.; Kansas City, Kan.; Columbus, Ohio, and Rochester, N.Y.

A program for Broward County, Fla., is on the drawing board right now.

A READER WRITES: Thank you for speaking up on behalf of middle-aged and older people who don't like the stereotyped view of us depicted in some of the so-called comedy shows currently seen on TV.

You may already know it, but Retirement Living magazine had a poll recently, and 56% of their readers who responded said they were unhappy with the way TV portrays senior citizens. For some reason the TV producers don't seem to realize that persons over 65 are 10% of our population.

If we who don't like the TV fare will only take the time to write to the stations or the advertisers, as you suggested in your recent column, maybe we'll get a more realistic interpretation of the capabilities and potential of aging persons.

COMMENT: The Federal Communications Commission has set up a new Consumer Assistance Office, which will serve as a clearinghouse for complaints. Bella Brooks O'Brien heads the new office.

Complaints about biased programming, or stereotyped portrayals of aging persons will have added impact if they are directed to Ms. O'Brien at Consumer Assistance Office, Federal Communications Commission, 1919 M St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20554.

Incidentally, for any of you who are Citizen Band (CB) radio buffs, this office will also be glad to answer your questions and hear your complaints about this new communications craze.

A READER WRITES: I was amused by your comment that fountain pens are becoming collector's items, particularly among young adults. I am in my 50s, and my wife and I have been having fun collecting old tools, which we find at rummage and garage sales.

This hobby is now getting a little more expensive than it was when we began doing it, but we enjoy hunting for bargains, and we've gotten a lot of pleasure out of learning what some of the old, odd-shaped tools were used for.

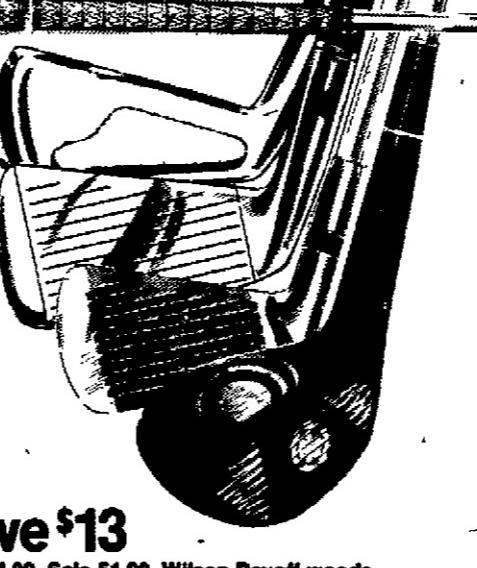

In a way, this is a Bicentennial hobby. Some of the tools are still useful, and most of them are interesting to look at. So, we clean them up, and the ones we can use now we have on a black pegboard on a wall in our breakfast room. The wall is a conversation piece for our friends; the more observant ones like to see if we've changed any of the tools for newer "finds."

I'm thinking now of incorporating photography with my tool hobby. With my wife doing the writing we are considering doing a booklet on the history of the tools we have found in our area of the state. Our librarian thinks that such a book would sell; she judges by inquiries she gets from patrons.

Have you devised some ingenious way to combine your hobby and a business? Tell Joanne Farris about it in a letter to her in care of this newspaper.

Perhaps your idea may be an inspiration to another reader in a distant section of the country.

Life Begins At Forty:

9 Dispute Settlement Program Sites Listed

By JOANNE FARRIS

A READER WRITES: I read your article on Citizen Dispute Settlement with interest. But since there are about nine cities in the United States adopting this program, why weren't these cities listed? Isn't that news? Surely it should not be a secret.

COMMENT: You are right, of course. Readers around the country naturally want to know if there is a Citizen Dispute Settlement Program near them.

The cities which currently have the program are: New York, N.Y.; East Cleveland, Ohio; Philadelphia, Pa.; Orlando, Miami, and Jacksonville, Fla.; Kansas City, Kan.; Columbus, Ohio, and Rochester, N.Y.

A program for Broward County, Fla., is on the drawing board right now.

A READER WRITES: Thank you for speaking up on behalf of middle-aged and older people who don't like the stereotyped view of us depicted in some of the so-called comedy shows currently seen on TV.

You may already know it, but Retirement Living magazine had a poll recently, and 56% of their readers who responded said they were unhappy with the way TV portrays senior citizens. For some reason the TV producers don't seem to realize that persons over 65 are 10% of our population.

If we who don't like the TV fare will only take the time to write to the stations or the advertisers, as you suggested in your recent column, maybe we'll get a more realistic interpretation of the capabilities and potential of aging persons.

COMMENT: The Federal Communications Commission has set up a new Consumer Assistance Office, which will serve as a clearinghouse for complaints. Belle Brooks O'Brien heads the new office.

Complaints about biased programming, or stereotyped portrayals of aging persons will have added impact if they are directed to Ms. O'Brien at Con-

In a way, this is a Bicentennial hobby. Some of the tools are still useful, and most of them are interesting to look at. So, we clean them up, and the ones we can use now we have on a black pegboard on a wall in our breakfast room. The wall is a conversation piece for our friends; the more observant ones like to see if we've changed any of the tools for newer "finds."

I'm thinking now of incorporating photography with my tool hobby. With my wife doing the writing we are considering doing a booklet on the history of the tools we have found in our area of the state. Our librarian thinks that such a book would sell; she judges by inquiries she gets from patrons.

Have you devised some ingenious way to combine your hobby and a business? Tell Joanne Farris about it in a letter to her in care of this newspaper. Perhaps your idea may be an inspiration to another reader in a distant section of the country.

Mansfield Urges Special Rights

Washington (UPI) — Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield has introduced legislation to extend immigration rights to the widow and children of Zohair Moghrabi, the Lebanese chauffeur who was assassinated with two American officials at the time, were also killed.

Mansfield said the bill, which also would extend a $50,000 payment to Mrs. Moghrabi and her children, is in recognition of the "supreme sacrifice in the service of the United States" made by Moghrabi.

Mansfield said under the U.S. Civil Service System, Mrs. Moghrabi would receive a pension of slightly more than $3,000 a year.

(Editor's Note: The Lincoln Star attempts to include in this column those events which are of interest to the general public or serve a public purpose and which are open to the public.

San Francisco — Why should the stock market go up when hemlines rise? Lay Dow-Jones averages and skirts side by side and you will find this is so.

When the miniskirt went out, the stock market dived. Hasn't come back to this sad, sad day. Encouraged by a friendly stock broker, I bought mutual funds at 9. They immediately went down to 6.

Voting Hall Helped Guard Democracy

By TOM LANSWORTH

Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Dorchester — When Chas and Elmer Mason drove their new Maxwell automobile up to the Lincoln Precinct voting hall to pick a president in 1916, Charles E. Hughes probably got their votes.

Democrat Woodrow Wilson carried Nebraska that year, but Lincoln Precinct was always a GOP stronghold.

It apparently also was something of a stronghold for democracy.

Lincoln Precinct residents took their right to vote so seriously that, sometime between 1885 and the turn of the century (there's no one left alive to remember exactly when), they built the only voting hall ever erected in Saline County.

The hall sat exactly halfway between Dorchester and Friend on U.S. 6 in the northern part of the county.

It cost about $350 to build more than 80 years ago, according to the best recollections of those who are old enough to know.

Mules Hauled Lumber

John Gilbert hauled the lumber for the wood frame building with his pair of white mules. Gilbert ran a big park near Friend complete with deer, buffalo and peacocks.

Inside, the hall was heated with a pot-bellied stove. A ballot counting room was partitioned off in one corner.

On election day the hall would be staffed by nine persons.

One very other day of every year, the hall stood empty. Most other voters in Saline County voted in school houses, but Lincoln Precinct had a voting hall and folks didn't want it used for anything else.

When electricity lighted farmhouses in Lincoln Precinct, the power was brought to the hall on election days via an extension cord from a farm 600 feet away.

That's all the way it used to be. Now half the voters in Lincoln Precinct go to Friend to cast their ballots and the rest go to Dorchester.

The voting hall doesn't sit out on U.S. 6 anymore either. The Saline County Board of Commissioners got tired of paying the $6 to use the old building every election and voted to close it a few years ago.

On Museum Grounds

Now the hall sits on the grounds of the Saline County Museum.

Rosa Dusaneck, secretary of the county historical society and curator of the museum, last winter got some men together to move the hall which had been donated to the society by precinct voters in 1970.

Mrs. Dusaneck says the hall was painted at one time but any evidence of that succumbed long ago to the sun and wind. No one ever though to it necessary to repaint.

"You know, after those old fellows dropped off, the others just didn't do much of anything," Mrs. Dusaneck remembers.

"They did put a new roof on it," she says, "I guess they figured that if it didn't rain on them everything else would take care of itself."

"The stove was gone by the time we got hold of it," Mrs. Dusaneck says of the hall. "People help themselves," you know, nowadays."

Most of the plaster is off the walls and raccoons had made a home in the roof. "We'll get it cleaned up in due time," Mrs. Dusaneck says. A pot-bellied stove from the museum's collection will be installed when the hall is restored.

Lincolnite Heads Elks, Lauds 'Process Of Law'

Chicago (UPI) — George B. Klein, newly elected Grand Exalted Ruler of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, said Monday the tendency of individual groups to seek preferential treatment from the government has been harmful to American society.

In his first speech after his election, Klein, 61, a Lincoln, Neb., insurance executive, said American ability to change institutions and practices through "orderly process of law . . . has helped our nation to develop."

But, he said, "All proposals for change in our institutions should be weighed carefully by all citizens to determine whether such change will reduce or add to our freedom." "We must guard against the growth of

"OSHA has proposed that any farm having five or more employees must have a toilet within five minutes walking distance."

"What I want to know is just how far is five minutes walking distance? My guess is the distance one could cover in five minutes would depend upon the length of a person's stride and the necessity."

She said the regulations ignore the conditions prevalent in the Midwest, where farming and ranching operations cover great expanses of land.

Mrs. Smith said the proposed regulations "are not merely off the mark . . . they are downright ridiculous."

Foreign Farm Journalists Tour State

Two busloads of foreign agricultural journalists who write for farm magazines in their countries are spending three days touring Nebraska.

The farm writers include both men and women from West Germany, Sweden, Norway, Australia, England, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Finland, Korea, The Philippines, Japan, the Netherlands, France, Indonesia, Israel, Iran and Italy. The group began its Nebraska

visit with a buffet reception in Lincoln where they were officially greeted by Glenn Kreuscher, state director of agriculture and members of the local agribusiness community.

The schedule for Wednesday calls for visits to the Trojan seed processing plant and a New Holland Farm Machinery Co. plant, in Grand Island, and a feedlot near Kearney.

Tuesday the group will visit two farm equipment dealerships, the Funks Seed experimental farm at Goehner, the Kissinger feedlot at Fairfield and the Stuhr Museum at Grand Island.

Wednesday they will visit the Middle Ranch at Stapleton and a

Mental Retardation Center Will Have Cozad Location

By The Associated Press

Procedure for phasing out programs for the severely retarded at the state's Cozad facility, and development of a new diagnostic center there have been announced by the state Board of Education.

A new $600,000 facility is due for completion by July 1, 1977, on a tract in north Cozad donated to the state by the city.

The center will have a team of specialists to assess mentally and physically handicapped children from throughout the state. In-service training, applied research and teacher training in special education will be offered.

Over-all goal is to develop and implement individual programs for the children so they may be in programs as close as possible to their homes, rather than face institutionalization.

Following the 1976-77 school year, the initial core population of the center will be comprised of some children who now attend the State School for Trained Mentally Retarded at Cozad, but for whom there is no appropriate alternative in or near their home school districts.

The core groups will be at the center a minimum of one semester during 1977-78 for a thorough assessment of their needs. Staff will observe how well the individual prescriptions for each child are working.

Foreign Farm Journalists Tour State

Two busloads of foreign agricultural journalists who write for farm magazines in their countries are spending three days touring Nebraska.

The farm writers include both men and women from West Germany, Sweden, Norway, Australia, England, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Finland, Korea, The Philippines, Japan, the Netherlands, France, Indonesia, Israel, Iran and Italy. The group began its Nebraska

visit with a buffet reception in Lincoln where they were officially greeted by Glenn Kreuscher, state director of agriculture and members of the local agribusiness community.

Tuesday the group will visit two farm equipment dealerships, the Funks Seed experimental farm at Goehner, the Kissinger feedlot at Fairfield and the Stuhr Museum at Grand Island.

Ft. Riley Troops Due In Parade

Diller — Troops from Ft. Riley and the 1st Infantry Division will take part in Diller's 80th annual picnic Friday, July 16. The 1st Infantry Division Band will march in the parade as will the Alexander Hamilton Color Guard provided by the First Battalion, 5th Field Artillery. Nebraska's replica of the Liberty Bell will be on display.

Ground Broken For Museum

Goehner — Ground was broken here in special ceremonies for the Seward County museum with about 200 persons attending. The museum project began three years ago when Walter and Doretta Goehner donated six acres of land to the Seward County Historical Society in memory of their parents. State Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica was main speaker at the ceremonies. A $54,000 museum building on the site is planned.

Easter Seal Scholarships Awarded

Omaha (UPI) — The Nebraska Easter Seal Society has awarded four scholarships of $250 each to college students studying in the health care fields. The society said the students receiving the awards were Judy Vlasin of Hastings, Steven Miller of Spalding, Kristen Menke of Omaha and Cynthia Meissner of Sidney.

Achievement Day Set At Davenport

Davenport — Dedication of the new Community Building at Davenport will be one of the highlights of the Bicentennial Achievement Day celebration here Monday, July 26. A parade, with the theme "And That's The Way It Was," will be staged at 5 p.m. A beef barbecue, 4-H dress revue, contests and a dance are also on the agenda.

Job Program Extended

Grand Island (UPI) — A federally sponsored program designed to give unemployed persons jobs in city government has been extended until Jan. 31, 1977. Grand Island, which has 19 positions under the comprehensive employment training act program, received an additional $65,000 in extension money, according to Bill Peters, city personnel director.

Withers Named To Pamida Post

Omaha (AP) — An executive with a Los Angeles drugstore chain has been named to the newly-created post of executive vice president with Pamida, Inc. He is Wayne Withers, 41, now the vice president for finance and secretary of Sav-On-Drugs, Inc. Pamida is the Omaha-based owner and operator of 194 Gibson Discount Centers throughout the upper midwest.

Albion Pulls Thousands To Parade

Albion (AP) — Thousands of persons lined the streets of Albion for a bicentennial parade that preceded the dedication of Boone County's new courthouse Monday.

Several government officials attended ceremonies for the building, on which construction started in October of 1974. It cost an estimated $363,000.

In his remarks, Whelan said, "Government does not protect the rights of free speech and

The schedule for Wednesday calls for visits to the Trojan seed processing plant and a New Holland Farm Machinery Co. plant, in Grand Island, and a feedlot near Kearney.

The group will visit wheat farms and irrigated farms near Holdrege and the Scout Rest Ranch at North Platte.

Thursday they will visit the Millide Ranch at Stapleton and a district 4-H horse show at Arnold before returning to Chicago.

A group of agricultural writers attended an international farm magazine writers meeting at Ames Iowa last week. Part of the group elected to take a bus tour of Nebraska and Iowa before returning to their homes.

Bob Bishop, managing editor of the Nebraska Farmer, is acting as tour guide for the group during their visit to Nebraska.

Retired Official Arndt Funeral Services Slated

Columbus (UPI) — Funeral services will be held Tuesday at Emmanuel Lutheran Church for Raymond W. Arndt, 69, retired power official and former Columbus manufacturer.

Arndt died at his home Sunday.

He was born at Platte Center Aug. 13, 1906 and was married to Luella Helbusch in 1931. He attended Concordia high school, Concordia Teachers College at Seward and the University of Wisconsin.

He was an elementary teacher in Milwaukee, accountant and auditor for the Nebraska Public Power System in Columbus and accountant and cost analyst for R. W. Beck & Associates in Columbus, Chicago, New York and the state of Washington.

Arndt was also founder and president of Habco Manufacturing Co. and Columbus

Raymond W.
Arndt

Engineering Co. as well as founder and officer of Dale Electronics.

He was administrative assistant to the executive manager and director of operations for the Nebraska Public Power District until he retired in 1971.

Arndt was active in the Nebraska Democratic party and was a U.S. Senate candidate in 1964.

Survivors include his widow, and children, Mrs. Kenneth Moersen, Columbus, Roland, Fremont, Leslie, Omaha.

Mental Retardation Center Will Have Cozad Location

By The Associated Press

Procedure for phasing out programs for the severely retarded at the state's Cozad facility, and development of a new diagnostic center there have been announced by the state Board of Education.

A new $600,000 facility is due for completion by July 1, 1977, on a tract in north Cozad donated to the state by the city.

The center will have a team of specialists to assess mentally and physically handicapped children from throughout the state. In-service training, applied research and teacher training in special education will be offered.

Over-all goal is to develop and implement individual programs for the children so they may be in programs as close as possible to their homes, rather than face institutionalization.

Following the 1976-77 school year, the initial core population of the center will be comprised of some children who now attend the State School for Trainable Mentally Retarded at Cozad, but for whom there is no appropriate alternative in or near their home school districts.

The core groups will be at the center a minimum of one semester during 1977-78 for a thorough assessment of their needs. Staff will observe how well the individual prescriptions for each child are working.

Equal Education Goal Of Project

Omaha (AP) — About 1,000 mentally and physically handicapped youngsters are being sought in Nebraska by Nebraska Child-Find, a new federally funded project.

Earl Dredge, project coordinator, said efforts will be made to identify and treat handicaps which interfere with a child's ability to get an education.

The project stems from 1974 federal legislation that says all handicapped children have a right to equal education opportunities.

To get federal assistance in education programs for the handicapped, states must show that all children who need special services are getting them, of

Brooks Shares A Blues Love Affair

By DEB GRAY
Star Staff Writer

By 10 p.m., those in the Zoo Bar had the spirit, the inspiration... what the blues guitarist on stage said he had felt all evening.

The space in front of the stage was wedged full of people; some abstractly weaving, eyes half-closed, others shouting, stomping out approval when they thought the music was especially right-on.

"Lonnie 'Guitar Jr.' Brooks thought it all was great.

"I haven't had this much fun since I was in Europe," he said. "The people here really seem to like the blues."

Brooks toured Europe in 1975, along with Chicago bluesmen Luther Johnson, Little Mack, Fred Below and Dave Meyers, all artists in the Chicago Blues Festival.

One English reviewer, who caught two of Brooks' performances in Holland, described him as "the star of the show," seeing Brooks playing his guitar (which he calls Jessy Mae) with his teeth, then playing it behind his back, then talking to it.

Before he went to Chicago and made it as Lonnie Brooks, the 45-year-old guitarist, raised on a farm near Dubuque, La., was known as Les Baker.

A nipped-in-the-bud romance turned Brooks to the guitar.

He had taken his girlfriend, who was 16 or 17 at the time, to a party. His first cousin was there, too, playing the guitar and singing "Call me the Fat Man"—a song Fats Domino recorded.

Brooks lost his girl to his guitar-playing cousin.

"That stuck in my mind," he said. "I said, 'I'm gonna try to play the guitar like him.'"

His first idol was T-Bone Walker. Then when he was 19, he moved to Port Arthur, Tex., where he heard B.B. King.

Brooks bought his first guitar when he was 22 years old—a $300 Strangecastle. His wife was not thrilled at the expenditure.

"I told her, 'I know I'm going to have to learn how to play it, as much as it cost.'"

Brooks taught himself to play, learning guitar technique in four months. He picked up singing from his brother, who sang in the church choir.

The first gigs were with rock-n-roll bands.

"I tried to learn how to play everything," he said.

Shortly after he recorded with Goldband records in 1958, he quit playing.

The next year, he moved to Chicago and lived off his music royalties and construction work.

Brooks said there will always be a market for the blues because "it's the root of music. It always will be."

And Chicago will always be its center, he said, "although to really work in Chicago you have to play a variety of music."

Brooks said he desires nothing more than to continue playing.

"I love music," he said. "That's my life."

Saving Pets With Fervor

Chicago (UPI) — She works with the fervor of an evangelist, and when it comes to saving lives she fights like a leatherneck.

For the last four years Gertrude Maxwell's mission has been saving the thousands of unwanted dogs and cats in Chicago's wealthy North Shore suburbs from being destroyed.

Recently, she also opened a chapter of Save-A-Pet Inc. in Miami Beach where she spends the winter. Comedian Jackie Gleason, resident of nearby Fort Lauderdale, is the organization's honorary national chairman, Mrs. Maxwell said.

A retired schoolteacher who resides in suburban Highland Park, Mrs. Maxwell began her Save-A-Pet crusade when she learned of the "totally inhuman" ways the unwanted animals.

"The incredible thing about our group is that we have a 100% adoption rate," said Mrs. Maxwell, who owns three afghans.

Brooks toured Europe in 1975, along with Chicago bluesmen Luther Johnson, Little Mack, Fred Below and Dave Meyers, all artists in the Chicago Blues Festival.

One English reviewer, who caught two of Brooks' performances in Holland, described him as "the star of the show," seeing Brooks playing his guitar (which he calls Jessy Mae) with his teeth, then playing it behind his back, then talking to it.

Before he went to Chicago and made it as Lonnie Brooks, the 45-year-old guitarist, raised on a farm near Dubuque, La., was known as Les Baker.

A nipped-in-the-bud romance turned Brooks to the guitar.

He had taken his girlfriend, who was 16 or 17 at the time, to a party. His first cousin was there, too, playing the guitar and singing "Call me the Fat Man" — a song Fats Domino recorded.

Brooks lost his girl to his guitar-playing cousin.

"That stuck in my mind," he said. "I said, 'I'm gonna try to play the guitar like him.'"

His first idol was T-Bone Walker. Then when he was 19, he moved to Port Arthur, Tex., where he heard B.B. King.

Brooks bought his first guitar when he was 22 years old — a $600 Strangecastle. His wife was not thrilled at the expenditure.

"I told her, 'I know I'm going to have to learn how to play it, as much as it cost.'"

Brooks taught himself to play learning guitar technique in four months. He picked up singing from his brother, who sang in the church choir.

The first gigs were with rock-n-roll bands.

"I tried to learn how to play everything," he said.

Shortly after he recorded with Goldband records in 1958, he quit playing.

The next year, he moved to Chicago and lived off his music royalties and construction work.

Brooks said there will always be a market for the blues because "it's the root of music. It always will be."

And Chicago will always be its center, he said, "although to really work in Chicago you have to play a variety of music."

Brooks said he desires nothing more than to continue playing.

"I love music," he said. "That's my life."

Saving Pets With Fervor

Chicago (UPI) — She works with the fervor of an evangelist, and when it comes to saving lives she fights like a leatherneck.

For the last four years Gertrude Maxwell's mission has been saving the thousands of unwanted dogs and cats in Chicago's wealthy North Shore suburbs from being destroyed.

Recently, she also opened a chapter of Save-A-Pet Inc. in Miami Beach where she spends the winter. Comedian Jackie Gleason, resident of nearby Fort Lauderdale, is the organization's honorary national chairman, Mrs. Maxwell said.

A retired schoolteacher who resides in suburban Highland Park, Mrs. Maxwell began her Save-A-Pet crusade when she learned of the "totally inhuman" ways the unwanted animals.

The incredible thing about our group is that we have a 100% adoption rate," said Mrs. Maxwell, who owns three afghans.

Lincoln Blues Hangout: Knock'n Around The Zoo

By DEB GRAY
Star Staff Writer

It was a love affair that started when Larry Boehmer was 7 years old, living in Seneca, Kan., 10 miles from the Nebraska border.

The town imported Kansas City musicians, and there Boehmer heard that melancholia descended from slave work songs which became his "main music": the blues.

Boehmer, part owner and manager of the Zoo Bar, 136 No. 14th St., now brings his music and his idols, to Lincoln.

He has helped create something that, all things considered, is pretty amazing — a blues scene in eastern Nebraska.

Bluesmen in Chicago, the center of the blues culture, know Lincoln.

"They've All Heard"

"They have all heard about the Zoo Bar," Boehmer said. "It's getting that kind of a name."

Some things never change . . . times are always hard for Chicago bluesmen. The old blues hang-outs have disappeared; discotheques in their places.

"These men have two choices," Boehmer said. "Die or find new places to go. Lincoln is becoming one of those places to go."

Boehmer became a regular Zoo customer four years ago, when two of his friends owned the bar.

Boehmer, who knew many blues players, offered to persuade musicians to perform at the bar if, in return, his friends would let him fill a row on the jukebox with music he liked, primarily blues.

The Cotton Blues Band from Ft. Collins, Colo., a group Boehmer knew, was the Zoo's first live act.

Boehmer also arranged the first gig for the Metatones, a band which soon attracted a fanatical cult following in Lincoln.

After he graduated from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln with a Master of Fine Arts degree, Boehmer turned down his one-and-only teaching offer, returned to the Zoo and became its manager in November, 1974.

Energies Occupied

The club now occupies most of Boehmer's energies. He still paints, having converted the floor above the bar into a studio.

He has shown paintings at Joslyn Art Museum in Omaha and has had a one-man show at Hastings College.

Bob Riedy was the first Chicago blues musician to perform at the Zoo.

On a trip to New York two years ago, Boehmer stopped in Chicago and heard Riedy perform.

After the first set, Boehmer approached Riedy and told him, "I have a bar in Lincoln, and I'd be interested in having your band come to my bar."

Riedy came. Others followed.

Luther Allison had a great time, playing the Zoo in September, 1975, the night after a UNL performance.

Allison at the Zoo was different from Allison at the university. He was nuts. He jumped on the tables, hopped on the bar.

All Night

Allison said he hadn't been in a place like that for six years . . . a place where he could play the music he wanted, straight blues, all night.

"He said he was going to tell Muddy Waters and B.B. King about us," Boehmer said.

As the word spread among Chicago bluesmen, things started happening for the Zoo.

"There is no way we can afford to pay these guys the usual concert fee," Boehmer said. "A lot of these people come here because they want to. They've heard it's fun."

In Chicago, where South Side blues are a way of life, musicians often play to a torpid audience of 25 or 30 people.

But here, they feel the adrenaline rush that comes out of 130 enthusiasts crushed into a long, shoebox-shaped room, Boehmer said. "The crowd treats them well."

Sponsors Concerts

The Zoo now has a Chicago blues act once a month. It also sponsors benefit concerts the third Wednesday of each month for the Lincoln Jazz Society.

"I've been wanting to get jazz in here for a long time," he said.

Boehmer said the crowd at the Zoo is "mainly here for the music" — not the Top of the Pop variety. "We have no commercial music at all," Boehmer said.

Boehmer plans to keep booking Chicago bluesmen, but he also hopes to expand, bringing in Texas bands, rhythm and blues, any good music.

"I believe in live music," Boehmer said.

BOEHMER . . . uses energies to make the Zoo

a blues name.

Neighborhood Officers Say Effort Starts With People

By LYNN ZERSCHLING

Star Staff Writer

Once upon a time many people thought all they had to do to fight crime was to fork over more money to the local police department for more men, more cruisers, more equipment.

It didn't work.

The Lincoln Police Department is taking a new approach to crime fighting through the Neighborhood Resource Officer program.

As a result, four officers are going to get back to some old fashioned, people-to-people police work.

It's that getting to know the people which seems to have attracted officers Jim Haynes, Emery Bashus, Harry McEntarffer and Larry Nelson to volunteer for the program in the first place.

Liked Idea

Haynes, who will work in either Clinton or Malone, said he "liked the idea of interacting with people and dealing with their problems."

McEntarffer, an eight-year-veteran of the force said he's done just about everything on the department. The program, he hopes, will "build trust back up in the police." He will be assigned to either the Clinton or Malone neighborhood.

Nelson, who will work in the near-south area from 9th to 13th, A to K St. considers the program a challenge.

Bashus, who will work in Belmont, said he wants to get to know people better, which was hard to do riding around in a squad car.

Police Chief George Hansen agrees. "Just putting an officer in a patrol car and having him ride around the streets is not going to prevent or solve many crimes."

Firmly Convinced

Hansen added, "I'm firmly convinced that if we're ever going to get a handle on crime, we have to look at new ways to provide police service to the community."

The NRO program, Hansen's brainchild, is an attempt to get the people and police together. That effort had it roots when citizens worked with police to outline what the program should be.

Then citizens from each neighborhood recently conducted extensive interviews of the dozen officers who volunteered for the program. The questions were tough and wide-ranging, the selected NRO officers agreed.

Chief Hansen accepted the neighborhood groups' recommendations because, he said, "They had a good handle on the kind of officer they wanted."

Because each of the four neighborhoods is somewhat different, each officer expects to handle his new beat in his own way.

Sgt. Ken Cauble, NRO coordinator, said the officers will set their own working hours and will be in uniform some of the time, in regular clothes at other times.

Cauble said it is that personal contact which should pay off for both the residents and the officer.

The program will "show people that police officers are human, too." And, as Nelson explained, he'll be glad to be working with "normal people."

The officers hope to help people get to know and care about their neighbors once again. Through door-to-door contacts and block meetings, they hope to erase the anonymity which has crept into Lincoln.

For instance, if a person knows the people next door are on vacation, maybe he'll keep a check on the house and report anything suspicious.

One of the indicators of the program's success, Chief Hansen said, "might be that we'll have more crime reported in those areas."

To Buy Van

The NRO program, which received $43,000 in federal funds, will be evaluated at the end of the first year. The federal dollars helped buy a new van which the NRO officers will use to display crime prevention techniques and will use as a meeting place. Chief Hansen said the program won't cost any extra money next year or require any additional officers.

The police officers are excited about the program, but Haynes summed up the four officers' feelings about their role in the program:

"It's just a chance to help."

"After awhile, you thought you knew more about the insurance business than most agents."

Parsley said he used a variety of schemes. His first was a bogus fall on a woman's lawn while he was working as a bill collector.

"That workman's compensation is something else," Parsley said. "The state even pushes for you to get paid. I was wowed by the quick payment."

From there, Parsley moved to the entire gambit of insurance payoffs. A call to a pharmacy led to a prescription for a drug which caused an allergic reaction.

Longtime Voter Breaks Record

ESCONDIDO, Calif. (AP) — Nellie Gleave first voted in 1899 — 21 years before women's suffrage in the United States — but says she won't be able to vote this November.

Mrs. Gleave's first ballot was cast in the Wyoming Territory. She said she has never missed a presidential election since.

Since she broke a hip in a fall, Mrs. Gleave has been confined to a convalescent hospital. She is nearly deaf and will be 100 years old on July 3.

"I haven't been able to listen, and I won't be told how to vote," she said.

Petersen Wins At Midwest

By KEN HAMBLETON

Star Sports Writer

Winning a 35-lap race after starting 13th in a field of 20 cars would be quite a feat for any driver.

But Clayton Petersen Jr., of Grand Island, felt that winning the special 35-lap Holiday super stock feature race Monday night at Midwest Speedway was the easiest race he's run in a long time.

Petersen, who worked his way through the field to second place by the 18th lap, started to gain ground on leader Kent Tucker; until an accident involving Bill Martin and Don Styksal caused a restart on the 21st lap.

Tucker roared into the lead on the restart with Petersen close behind. But on the second turn Tucker's car slid sideways into the infield and Petersen breezed to the finish and to a large share of the $5,000 purse.

"My tires just cooled down while we were waiting for the restart and I just wasn't thinking ahead," said Tucker, last year's Midwest Speedway point champion. "The track was very dry and slick and with cold tires I just wasn't getting the traction I needed to get around the turn."

Petersen, who finished the race unchallenged, speculated that he would have won the race even if Tucker hadn't spun.

"I was running in the low groove and getting better traction than most of the other drivers," said Petersen. "We run with about 100 horsepower less than most of the drivers and with a slick track I think we have an advantage."

Dean Ward, who won Sunday night's feature race at Midwest, finished second, but not without a battle.

Ward worked his way to fourth early in the race, and ran even with Dick Jensen for the next 15 laps, as the two traded slight advantages on each lap.

On the 26th lap, both Ward and Jensen passed Bob Kosiski, who was running in second place, and the two drivers still battled for a margin.

"I was just happy to get out in front of the pack and stay away from the traffic," said Paulus. "A restart late in the race cleared the way for me to run to the finish and I guess it worked out the best it could."

"I was happy that was all going on behind me and not in front," said Petersen. "It was able to get through some holes early in the race and was able to avoid the battles."

"We've run 125 races without blowing an engine and I was running easy tonight," said Petersen. "It helps when you can kind of let up and save yourself and the car for another race."

John Welsh of Junction City,

Kan., won the hobby B feature while John Gerloff of Hickman finished second.

Opstein Shoots For Derby

By MARK GORDON

Star Sports Writer

Omaha — Ken Opstein is starting to become excited about Marathon.

"When I named him Marathon it indicates distance. My whole objective is to have a Kentucky Derby winner. I'm just not looking for sprinters," noted the South Sioux City owner whose swift 2-year-old captured the first division of the $46,225 Juvenile Stakes here Monday at Ak-Sar-Ben.

Hoss Inman's Special Warmth won the second division. She was one of three fillies in that 6-furlong race.

While Opstein realizes some rich 2-year-old stakes races might develop for Marathon later this fall, he doesn't want to take any chances.

"As 2-year-olds, horses are in the stage of developing. More injuries happen," he explained. "I don't want to injure him. I want him to go on developing. I have aspirations of this horse running in big races."

Another factor to Marathon's impressive run was that he was well off the early pacesetter, P. T. Barnum. He was eighth for the early part of the 6-furlong jaunt that attracted 11 juveniles.

When jockey Bruce Brown asked him to move, he started flying on the outside despite two problems — dirt thrown in his face and hesitating when he was struck by the whip.

"He ran kind of green," Opstein said. "When he got some dirt kicked at him, he shied a little. Then when he was hit (by the whip) he ducked in a little at the eighth-pole. That's from experience."

The nice thing about him is that he can be rated (paced). He doesn't have to go all out. But I think if we gave him 90 days off that would be great."

So put Marathon into your memory books. Maybe his name will be on the program at Churchill Downs on the first Saturday next May. At least, that's Ken Opstein's desire.

In running the Juvenile in 1:12, Marathon returned $6.20, $3.80 and $3.00. Jay W. Chestnut, J. J. Battle, ridden by Ken Jones, placed for $5.20 and $3.20.

The Kemling Brothers' Amadevil, winner of four straight Omaha races, showed under John Lively for $2.80.

Marathon earned $25,423.75.

In the second division, jockey Sam Maple continued his winning streak by bringing in Special Warmth to the fifth-place verdict over Bare Blade.

The victory on Special

Warmth was Maples fourth

Monday win after capturing five races Saturday, including the $10,000 Cornhusker Handicap.

Special Warmth led throughout although Bare Blade was rapidly approaching the filly near the wire.

She earned $25,176.25 of the $45,775 purse.

In running a 1:12 2-5, Special

Warmth returned $4.40, $4.00 and $3.00. Bare Blade, ridden by Danny Whited, placed for $10.20 and $5.20. Lanyons View showed for $3.40.

Despite only 21,884 patrons, the holiday wagering of $1,954,438 set a Fourth of July mark, shattering last year's previous total of $1,710,667.

Master Derby Out Of Racing

Omaha — Master Derby will never race again.

That was confirmed here Monday afternoon when Mrs. Verna Lehmann, the owner of Golden Chance Farm told Omaha World-Herald racing writer Don Lee that the 4-year-old standout sustained a hairline fracture of a sesamoid during the running of Saturday's Cornhusker Handicap here at Ak-Sar-Ben.

Speaking from her Paris, Ky. home, she said Master Derby will be syndicated for stud duty.

She declined to reveal the names of the possible buyers or the price.

She said Master Derby was scheduled to make just three appearances this year before being syndicated. The injury, she noted, simply will hasten his retirement from racing.

It is not known precisely where the injury occurred during Master Derby's fifth-place effort in the Cornhusker as the 1-2 choice. Some stable employees said it occurred near the stretch turn of the mile and 1/8th chance. Others said it happened deep in the stretch.

Master Derby will leave Tuesday morning for Chicago. Trainer Shirley Adams was here late Monday. He was in Chicago Monday afternoon.

The son of 1970 Kentucky Derby by winner Dust Commander made 33 starts in his career, earning $718,444, including $4,420 for his effort in the Cornhusker Handicap.

He scored seven stakes victories, including the 1975 Preakness Stakes at Pimlico.

His $100,000-added stakes victories came in the Oaklawn Handicap, the New Orleans Handicap, the Louisiana Derby and the Kindergarten Stakes.

He finished third in his previous Omaha appearance in 1975 in the $100,000-added Omaha Gold Cup Stakes.

Master Derby's career record showed 16 triumphs, 8 seconds and 4 thirds. He started seven times as a 2-year-old, and 13 times each as a 3-and 4-year-old.

Mackanin and Andre Thornton homered for the Expos.

Steve Renko and Joe Cole man combined on a three-hitter and Rick Monday scored the 11-2 and Houston defeated the Mets 7-3.

Luis Tiant gave up 11 hits but was tough when he had to be in pitching the Red Sox to victory over the Kansas City Royals 2-1 in the opener of a four-game set between the American League

Divisional leaders.

Martin lodged a formal protest in the ninth inning, charging that

Kansas City's Hal McRae, who had been inserted into the outfield after Amos Otis got hurt, took too many warmup throws, throws to loosen his arm and McRae claimed that five was the limit for a new fielder coming into the game.

With the game officially on record as being protested, the Yankees proceeded to blow an opportunity to win in the ninth when they stranded three runners after having loaded the bases with only one out. Steve Mingori, who notched his sixth save with 1-2-3 innings of scoreless relief, got both Mickey Rivers and Roy White to pop out to end the game.

Kansas City scored its runs after two were out in the first inning off loser Doyle Alexander and Russell homered in the fourth to make the score 2-0. Russell also singled home a run in the fourth and Bill Buckner, Garvey and Ron Cey singled home runs in the ninth.

Joe Morgan drove in five runs with a grand slam homer and a sacrifice fly and Doug Flynn hit a two-run homer for the Reds.

Jack Billingsley went the distance with an eight-hitter squaring his record at 6-6. Pete

McTee was the winner while Brent Strom was the loser.

Bobby Murcer doubled and scored the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning as San

turn. Clayton Petersen of Grand Island won the super stock A feature while Ward finished second. Rick Paulus won the feature for hobby stocks.

Petersen Wins At Midwest

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

Winning a 35-lap race after starting 13th in a field of 20 cars would be quite a feat for any driver.

But Clayton Petersen Jr., of Grand Island, felt that winning the special 35-lap Holiday super stock feature race Monday night at Midwest Speedway was the easiest race he's run in a long time.

Petersen, who worked his way through the field to second place by the 19th lap, started to gain ground on leader Kent Tucker, until an accident involving Bill Martin and Don Styskal caused a restart on the 21st lap.

Tucker roared into the lead on the restart with Petersen close behind. But on the second turn Tucker's car slid sideways into the infield and Petersen breezed to the finish and to a large share of the $3,500 purse.

"My tires just cooled down while we were waiting for the restart and I just wasn't thinking ahead," said Tucker, last year's Midwest Speedway point champion. "The track was very dry and slick and with cold tires I just wasn't getting the traction I needed to get around the turn."

Petersen, who finished the race unchallenged, speculated that he would have won the race even if Tucker hadn't spun.

"I was running in the low groove and getting better traction than most of the other drivers," said Petersen. "We run with about 100 horsepower less than most of the drivers and with a slick track I think we have an advantage."

Dean Ward, who won Sunday night's feature race at Midwest, finished second, but not without a battle.

Ward worked his way to fourth early in the race, and ran even with Dick Jensen for the next 15 laps, as the two traded slight advantages on each lap.

On the 26th lap, both Ward and Jensen passed Bob Kosiski, who was running in second place, and the two drivers still battled for a margin.

On the last lap, Ward, driving in the low groove, was able to finally establish himself as Jensen was slowed by a lap-car and Kosiski moved into third. But on the last turn, the opposite happened and Jensen nipped Kosiski for third at the finish line.

"I was just happy to get out in front of the pack and stay away from the traffic," said Paulus. "A restart late in the race cleared the way for me to run to the finish and I guess it worked out the best it could."

Ed Bowes of Lincoln led from start to finish in the super stock B feature, while Gene Hromas of Ulysses placed second. Don Drouet took over the lead from Ray Lipsey on the third lap of the 10 lap consolation super stock race to gain a berth in the A feature.

Other super stock winners included Al Humphrey of Giltner in the trophy dash and Don Styskal, Petersen, Craig Lockhart and Bill Martin in the heat races.

Grand Slam Out For Injured Borg

Bjorn Borg
Out Of Tourney

Officials of the first Grand Slam of Tennis tournament in Myrtle Beach, S.C., were notified that Bjorn Borg, the winner of this year's Wimbledon championship, will not play in the tourney.

Officials said Borg aggravated a stomach muscle strain he had at Wimbledon and would be unable to compete at doctors' orders.

He will be replaced by Jimmy Connors in the tourney this weekend.

Other Tennis

Wimbledon tennis champion Chris Evert said an alternate women's tournament may be held next year if women don't receive the same prize money as men at Wimbledon.

Douglas Palm, an unheralded Swede, edged third-seeded Mark Edmondson of Australia in a three set match for the first major upset of the $100,000 Swedish Open tennis championship.

Auto Racing

Alabama International Motor Speedway officials have set a record purse of $201,045 for the Talladega 500 Winston Cup Grand National stock car race Aug. 8.

An international auto racing appeal tribunal in Paris reinstated Briton James Hunt as the winner of the Spanish Grand Prix. Hunt had been disqualified after officials found Hunt's McLaren to be 1.5 centimeters — about one-half inch — wider than new regulations allowed. Niki Lauda had been awarded the title until the tribunal's reversal.

Victory in the Firecracker 400 boosted Cale Yarborough to the No. 2 earnings spot in the NASCAR competition.

He Gets Kick Out Of Life

Santa Rosa, Calif. (UPI) — Gordon Tovani, who gets his kicks by kicking footballs in his bare feet, claimed a new world record for kicking field goals barefooted after booting 1,111 of them on the Fourth of July.

Tovani, 50, had hoped to kick 1,776 for the bicentennial celebration but the dorsiflexor muscle in his ankle gave out.

However, he passed his previous record of 635 consecutive bare-toed kicks handily. "It was a kick and I would have liked to do the 1,776," he said Monday.

He said 88 per cent of the holiday field goals were successful.

Anthony Keeps Leads

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Earl Anthony retained his lead after Monday's fifth round of the Professional Bowlers Association's $60,000 Southern California Open bowling tournament.

The 23-time champion from Tacoma, Wash., had his lead drop from 107 pins to 82 over Paul Colwell, Tucson, Ariz.

Anthony's pinfall for 34 games was 7,762 on 7,417 actual sticks spilled, a 218 average, and 345 bonus pins for his 11-4-1 match play log. Colwell was at 7,680.

Rounding out the top five were Keith Craycraft, New Martinsville, W.Va., 7,668; Mike Durbin, Chagrin Falls, Ohio, 7,569, and Dave Frame, Baldwin Park, Calif., 7,566.

Anthony's play fell off from the 1,923 he shot Sunday night as he knocked down only 1,713 pins in Monday's early round.

"I couldn't get the right speed," he said. "I just didn't adjust soon enough, often enough, and it cost me."

A final round was scheduled for later Monday with the top five then advancing to Tuesday's showdown for the $6,000 first prize.

Otis To Miss Some Games

NEW YORK (AP) — Star centerfielder Amos Otis of the Kansas City Royals injured his right shoulder while attempting a diving catch in the ninth inning of Monday's game against the New York Yankees.

X rays of Otis' shoulder were negative but a club spokesman said he probably would miss a few games.

Prior to Monday's game, Otis led the American League in slugging percentage with a .497 mark and in runs scored with 53. He was second in total bases, tied for third in doubles, tied for fourth in runs batted in and sixth in home runs.

$16,500 Satisfies Fidrych

Detroit (AP) — Sports writers, broadcasters, fans and even a state legislator have begun a campaign urging the Detroit Tigers to give rookie pitching sensation Mark "The Bird" Fidrych a raise.

Fidrych currently makes the major league minimum of $16,500. His supporters figure the way he's been winning and drawing thousands of fans to Tiger Stadium, he is worth much, much more.

But the Bird, true to his image as an individualist, says he doesn't want more money. He's even tired of hearing people say that he should be getting more.

"Hell no," he said bluntly, when asked whether he thought he should get a raise.

"This is the most I've ever made in my life," said the 21-year-old right-hander, whose latest effort was a 4-0 shutout over Baltimore Saturday night.

That came on the heels of a nationally televised triumph over the New York Yankees last Monday night which placed him squarely in the national spotlight.

"What happens if (General Manager Jim Campbell) did give me a raise?" Fidrych said. "It might go to my head and I'd start losing."

Fidrych's latest triumph, which drew a near-capacity crowd of 51,032 to Tiger Stadium, was his eighth in a row and ninth in 10 decisions. He has completed nine of the 10 and his only loss was a 2-0 complete-game setback to Luis Tiant of Boston.

The Bird's earned-run-average of 1.85 is the American League's best.

But despite those gaudy statistics, he's happy with his modest salary.

"I'm satisfied with what I'm getting," Fidrych reiterated. "I don't need an agent."

Campbell has said the club doesn't usually give mid-season raises, "so why start now?"

Marchibroda Picks His Colts Too

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Last year the Baltimore Colts opened their pre-season camp with a team coming off a 2-12 season, a rookie head coach and predictions of another bottom finish for the once mighty Colts.

When the Colts' 1976 camp opens Tuesday, Coach Ted Marchibroda will welcome virtually the same 1975 team which surprised the experts by winning the American Football Conference's Eastern Division with a 10-4 record.

The Colts will play the Cleveland Browns in an NFL exhibition game at 2 p.m. July 31 at Nebraska Memorial Stadium.

New Zealanders Miss New Marks

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Dick Quax missed the world 5,000-meter mark by only one-tenth of a second and John Walker was two seconds off the 1,500-meter record in a strong display of running by the two New Zealanders at an international pre-Olympic track meet Monday.

Quax, 27, was timed in 13:13.8 in a race which produced five national records.

Walker, 24, the milk king who shattered the world 2,000-meter mark in Oslo last Wednesday, earlier had recorded the world's best time this year in the metric mile, 3:34.2.

Both times bettered the previous track records at Stockholm's Olympic Stadium.

Emiel Puttemans of Belgium holds the world 5,000-meter mark of 13:13.0, set four years ago. Filbert Bayi of Tanzania set the 1,500-meter standard of 3:32.2 two years ago.

Quax took the lead at the 1,500 meter mark and never lost it, despite a fantastic kick which started with 300 meters to go by West German sensation Klaus-Peter Hildenbrand.

Hildenbrand was more than 150 meters behind with one lap left and almost caught the New Zealander at the finish. The West German, who earlier had a previous best in the distance at 13:29.6, was timed in Now, instead of promises for the future, Marchibroda predicts another division title. "I'd have to go along with picking us," Marchibroda said.

"We won the division last year and we've got to be considered champions until somebody beats us out," he added.

While the coaches spent much of last year's camp evaluating players, the 1976 squad appears set. Of the 22 starting positions, all are filled with incumbents except the fullback spot, which will be contested by Kim Jones and Roosevelt Leaks.

"I think the team is coming into camp with an even better attitude this year," Marchibroda said. "We got a taste of success last year, but there's much more for us to accomplish."

"The fact that we can't catch anyone underrates us this year, the fact that we've got a much tougher schedule, those should be incentives to another productive season."

The vanguard of 29 rookie and 18 veteran Colts arriving at Goucher College will have only three days to prepare for Saturday's "Colt Nite" game in nearby Annapolis against Philadelphia's rookies and second year players.

The rest of the squad will report after Saturday's contest.

Jones Ignoring Records

CHICAGO (AP) — Randy Jones, the San Diego Padres' classy left-hander, is not thinking about 30 victories or the All-Star Game or getting into the record books.

He's thinking about the Chicago Cubs.

Jones, 26, chalked up his 15th victory Sunday with a tidy nine-hitter, 5-2 decision over the Los Angeles Dodgers. That put him within one game of tying the National League record for most victories before the All-Star break and just two shy of the major league mark.

It also stirred up talk of a possible 30-win season, the first in the majors since Denny McLain did it for Detroit in 1968. The last National Leaguer to win 30 was Dizzy Dean with St. Louis in 1934.

Jones, who has lost three and carries a 2.51 earned run average, goes after his 16th victory here Thursday afternoon. He's not looking any further ahead than that.

"It's a funny game," said Jones. "I read about other pitchers who had a lot of wins at the break, then barely won 20. Last year I finished up 9-7 after the All-Star break and I didn't really feel like I pitched any differently than in the first half when I was 11-5. Maybe the breaks won't go my way like they have been."

"Right now I'm just looking for No. 16."

Jones says he is wary of the Cubs, even though they are drifting toward the National League East basement.

"They're always tough on me so I'm going to be very, very careful. I think I'll try to make nothing but perfect pitches for the first few innings and see how it goes."

If he beats the Cubs Thursday he could go after win No. 17 Sunday in Philadelphia. That would tie him with Oakland's Vida Blue for most wins before the All-Star Game, which will be played Tuesday in Philadelphia.

"Will he pitch Sunday, even though that would mean he would not be rested for his expected appearance in the All-Star game?

"The start Sunday against the Phillies is going to be left up to management," Jones said. "I imagine it will depend on how many pitches I throw Thursday and just generally how I feel."

Quax, 27, was timed in 13:13.8 in a race which produced five national records.

Walker, 24, the mile king who shattered the world 2,000-meter mark in Oslo last Wednesday, earlier had recorded the world's best time this year in the metric mile, 3:34.2.

Both times bettered the previous track records at Stockholm's Olympic Stadium.

Emiel Puttemans of Belgium holds the world 5,000-meter mark of 13:13.0, set four years ago. Filbert Bayi of Tanzania set the 1,500-meter standard of 3:32.2 two years ago.

13:13.8—only seven seconds behind Quax—for a national record.

Rod Dixon, another New Zealander, finished third in 13:17.4 despite suffering from a bad cold. Dixon had won his last four races at the grueling distance.

Fourth place went to Sweden's 3,000-meter steeplechase record holder Anders Garderud in 13:17.6, another national mark. Poland's Bronislaw Malinowski clocked 13:17.8 for fifth, also producing a national record.

The fifth national mark was set by Swiss runner Markus Riffel, who came in seventh in 13:32.8.

Quax said he probably would have beaten Puttemans' record if he had known his splits.

"I didn't hear the intermediate times on the loudspeaker during the race," he said. "I felt I was running a fast race, but if I had known I was so close I would have wiped out the record."

The New Zealander, whose time makes him one of the top favorites for the Olympic Gold in Montreal later this month, said he didn't worry about Hildenbrand.

"No, I knew where he was. I had the race under control from when I took over the lead. But I never thought he would be so strong at the end."

Tate Enters Olympics

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Heavyweight John Tate pounded his way onto the U.S. Olympic boxing team with a unanimous decision over Marvin Stinson of Philadelphia Monday in the Olympic boxoff at the University of Vermont.

Michael Spinks of St. Louis and Clinton Jackson of Evergreen, Ala., also posted victories Monday.

Spinks knocked out Keith Broom of the U.S. Navy at 2:17 of the first round and Jackson won a unanimous decision from

In the stretch I really went to work on him and he had enough to do the job."

Hedrod Gustaves, who rode Forego, said: "I was getting to him but the winner never quit. We just didn't have enough ground."

Craig Perret, who rode Lord Rebeau to a third-place finish, said: "He broke sharply and was close to the pace the whole trip. We were going along at a slow pace and at the half-mile pole I asked him to pick it up for me."

"He ran a great race."

Forego, the two-time Horse of the Year carrying top weight of 134 pounds, spotted Foolish Pleasure nine pounds and just missed winning in a thrilling finish to the 1 1/2-mile stakes. Another nose back was Lord Rebeau under 116 pounds.

Foolish Pleasure, winner of the 1975 Kentucky Derby, took the lead soon after the start and opened up a five-length lead down the backstretch. Lord Rebeau was in closest pursuit, with Forego in third place on the outside.

Coming to the head of the stretch Foolish Pleasure hung to a narrow lead along the rail with Lord Rebeau right alongside and Forego closing on the outside. The three crossed the wire so closely bunched it was difficult to call the Foolish Pleasure went off at 5-2, second choice in the betting, and paid $7.60. The Brooklyn Handicap on July 24 completes the triple.

NEW YORK (AP) — In a thrilling battle between racing millionaires, Foolish Pleasure upset mighty Forego by a nose in the 90th running of the $108,800 Suburban Handicap at Aqueduct Race Track Monday.

A crowd of 41,172 saw the 4-year-old Foolish Pleasure open a five-length lead down the backstretch and just hold off the late charge of Forego.

"Down the backstretch they weren't really running at us and the pace was slow enough so that he was running real easy," said jockey Eddie Maple, who rode the winner.

"They started to run at us leaving the five-eighths pole and I shook him up a bit.

In the stretch I really went to work on him and he had enough to do the job."

Heliodoro Gustines, who rode Forego, said: "I was getting to him but the winner never quit. We just didn't have enough ground."

Craig Perret, who rode Lord Rebeau to a third-place finish, said: "He broke sharply and was close to the pace the whole trip. We were going along at a slow pace and at the half-mile pole I asked him to pick it up for me."

"He ran a great race."

Foolish, the two-time Horse of the Year carrying top weight of 134 pounds, spotted Foolish Pleasure nine pounds and just missed winning in a thrilling finish to the 13 ½-mile stakes. Another nose back was Lord Rebeau under 116 pounds.

Foolish Pleasure, the 2-5 favorite, paid $2.20 to place. There was no show betting since the field was reduced to four with the late scratching of Group Plan and El Pitirre.

Gorgo, the fourth horse in the field, finished last as a 14-1 choice.

The defeat thwarted Forego's hopes of sweeping the New York Racing Association's handicap triple crown. He had won the first leg, the Metropolitan Mile, at Belmont on May 31. It was the third straight year hopes for a sweep of the triple crown went down the drain.

The Brooklyn Handicap on July 24 completes the triple.

Day After Is Just That

By The Associated Press
American Samoa and Holland, Mich., celebrated the Bicentennial a day late for religious reasons while Sauk Centre, Minn., will whoop it up next weekend, combining the nation's birthday with "Sinclair Lewis Days" in honor of a home town boy.

Elsewhere, continuing festivities brought in the start of the nation's third century Monday with a mixture of hangovers and hoopla.

There was some sadness, too. More than 400 persons died on the nation's highways; several houses were set ablaze in fireworks mishaps, and Bicentennial brawls broke out although most celebrants were peaceful.

The nation's capital was still getting over one of the biggest traffic jams in its history Monday morning. The snarl of cars and buses resulted from the fireworks show the night before that attracted more than one million people to the Washington Mall.

In New York, thousands came aboard the tall ships which put into port and put down their gangplanks for the public after Sunday's sea parade. But, on orders from their government, the Russians anchored their two ships, the tallest of the tall, in the harbor.

There was plenty of day-after revelry in the nation.

Some 60,000 Shriners staged a seven-hour parade in Kansas City while Cincinnati, Ohio, put on a 10-hour program highlighted by barbershop quartets, kite flying contests, fireworks and parade.

In Port Huron, Mich., 47-year-old escape artist Don Viano made quick work of a coffin board, three padlocks and chains Monday, surfacing from the St. Clair River minus his impediments after just 30 seconds.

Republicans gathered in Jackson, Mich., meanwhile, to re-enact their party's first national convention. The party was officially founded "under the oaks" of Jackson in 1854.

The Tennessee American Legion staged a parade in Kingsport featuring more than 50 floats.

Rexburg Is Alive

In Rexburg, Idaho, a drum and bugle corps led a mile-long parade that featured the cleanup crews and a search and rescue posse that helped out after a dam burst and devastated the town one month ago Monday. "Today's parade was a makeshift affair, just to let people know we're still alive," said Mayor John Porter. "We've decided that next Fourth of July will be our bicentennial."

Fireworks were painted red, white and blue in the central Pacific territory of American Samoa as July 4th celebrations got under way a day late in deference to the religious influence of the 19th century missionaries. Thousands from around the island territory gathered in Pago Pago for the two days of celebrations that will feature a longboat race, a cricket match and a greased pig chase.

Two Michigan towns — Eaton Rapids near Lansing and Holland near Grand Rapids — also put God before country and delayed their celebrations.

And officials in Sauk Centre, considered the model of Lewis' Main Street and other books, said the dairy farming town of 3,750 plans to hold its festivities next weekend: combining the town's centennial celebration, "Sinclair Lewis Days" and the nation's 200th birthday.

Flags Stolen

The nation's third century got off on the wrong foot in Cincinnati when three American flags owned by relatives and friends of dead military veterans were stolen at a patriotic picnic.

"How could anyone steal an American flag on the Fourth of July?" asked Gladys Fryer, widow of a World War I veteran.

In Kansas City, at least 13 house fires were touched off by fireworks, most attributed to illegal rockets fired from bottles.

New York officials dug out from underneath 600 tons of garbage left behind by more than six million who turned out to see Operation Sail on Sunday. Tons of trash were left scattered around Independence Hall in Philadelphia where workers were busy cleaning up for Queen Elizabeth's visit Tuesday.

In Washington, D.C., 14 mobile Red Cross units treated 1,200 celebrants Sunday for a variety of injuries ranging from heat prostration to broken legs. They were so busy they ran out of Band-Aids.

Violence erupted late Sunday in Woodbridge, Va., when police broke up a Fourth of July party following complaints by neighbors about the noise. One officer was hit over the head with a full beer can and another was knifed. Twenty-eight persons were arrested, police said.

Thirteen youths were arrested as a crowd of a thousand or more youths got out of hand in Lake George, N.Y. on Monday morning.

"It was really no different than any other Fourth," said Clay Beaudet, the resort's chief of police.

The nation's birthday party turned to a Bicentennial brawl in Forks, Wash., where about 200 loggers and motorcyclists battled for two hours outside a bar. Two persons were hospitalized and the Bicentennial dance was canceled.

More serious violence was reported in the California resort town of Cayucos when a July 4 fireworks display turned into a bottle-throwing binge that left three officers injured, authorities said. The crowd set free four suspects from patrol cars and injured three deputies.

In Delavan, Wis., 50 persons were treated at a hospital after a tear gas bomb was set off beneath bleachers as a crowd of about 5,000 watched Fourth of July fireworks at Athletic Park. Police Sgt. Harry Larson, who was at the scene, said "they all panicked ... They came down off those stands just like a waterfall."

Nearly 200 people were treated and released at a Palm Springs hospital after a tear gas bomb was set off at a football stadium packed with 10,000 Bicentennial celebrants Sunday, authorities said.

"There were people running all over the place," a witness said. "The stadium was in turmoil with old people throwing up and choking."

Riot Lasts 3 Hours

A three-hour clash between hundreds of youths and police in Virginia Beach, Va., early Monday resulted in 78 arrests. Police used tear gas and dogs to break up the riot in the night club district where 11 officers were hurt and several rioters suffered dog bites.

"It was an overreaction to the Fourth of July celebration," a policeman said. "I don't think this is the way to celebrate the nation's 200th birthday."

together, that's progress of a sort, I guess."

James F. Sceare, Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service chief, would only say,

"We're still working. We've got some things to do."

Suey continued to direct the mediation effort and an aide said he planned to stay "at least for now."

The last report of progress came from Bommarito Sunday following the end of a 17½ hour bargaining session. He declined to say how much progress was made on which issues, but it was known that the major issues of cost of living, wages and pensions were under discussion.

French Flotilla Could Intervene

PARIS (AP) — A French flotilla capable of carrying tactical nuclear arms could "intervene rapidly" anywhere in the Mediterranean and the Indian Ocean next year, former spy chief Adm. Albert John Read says.

In a summary of remarks he made in March before the National Defense Institute, published Monday by the National Defense Review, the admiral said the 20-ship fleet will allow France to maintain a "presence" in the seas; to pursue a policy of "deterrance" allowing the government time to make decisions, and to intervene if necessary.

Police said that the two were arrested as they left a window above Braemore's at 1208 P St. about 4 a.m. The pair spent the remainder of the weekend in jail awaiting a Tuesday court appearance, police said.

Site Pickers Play 'Cosmic Ice Hockey'

Pasadena, Calif. (UPI) — New Viking 1 pictures of the spacecraft's landing site on Mars Monday showed flat plains between crater fields where scientists were playing "cosmic ice hockey" with the target area for the July 17 landing.

Dr. Hal Masursky, head of the landing site team, said an ellipse — the egg-shaped area within which the lander will put down after rockets separate it from the orbiter — was moved around within the site.

"It's what we call cosmic ice hockey with the ellipse as the puck," he said. "We move it around until we get to the right place."

An ellipse is 149 miles long by 62 miles wide. Viking has a 99.7% chance of landing within that area once separated from the orbiter and a 50-50 chance of landing within a chosen area about half that size.

Dr. Michael Carr Monday showed pictures taken of the C-1 site, a probable landing area for Viking 2 which is scheduled to orbit Mars Aug. 7 and land Sept. 4.

The photos show plains between craters, dune fields and long channels which he said could have been caused by lava, streams of water or underground flows or liquid water or lava.

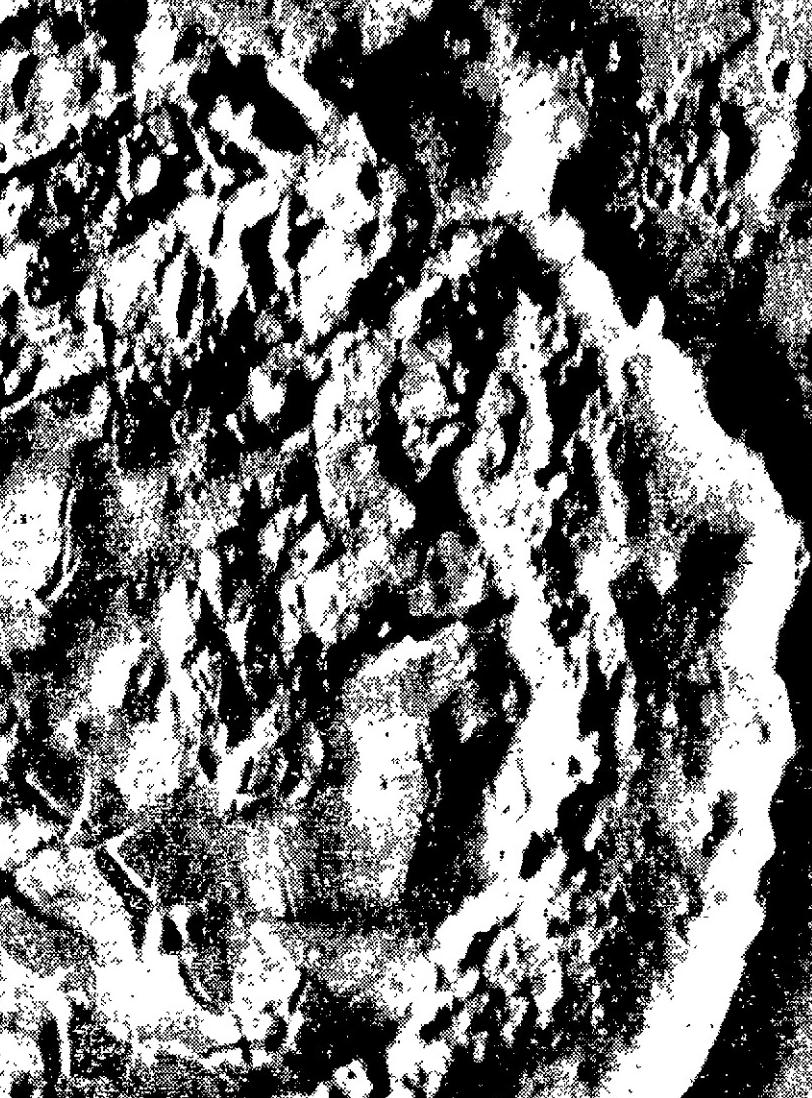

Earlier, Dr. Harold Klein, head of the biology team, said he was concerned that too much emphasis was being placed on the biology experiments of Viking.

He said there were 13 other experiments and termed Viking a "magnificent achievement" in view of the information it already has transmitted back to Earth.

Klein said he feared the public might be led to perceive the project only as a search for life, which if it exists on Mars, might still be missed by the Viking tests.

Project director Jim Martin said Viking 1 was slowly drifting toward the new landing site, the Northwest Territory, and an engine burn would be made Thursday to fit it into the precise orbit.

Viking 2 was 4.5 million miles from Mars, closing at about 250,000 miles per day for its Aug. 7 orbit insertion.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

★ By SIDNEY OMARR ★
Tuesday, July 6, 1976

Leo cannot be "contained" in sense that enough is enough. Means the native has grand dreams, not illusions — Leo can make what appears to be a miracle become an actuality. In so doing, Leo's attitude follows the good and the detractors. Perhaps the two most controversial zodiacal signs are Scorpio — and Leo. What is your Leo about on this day?

SCORPIO (Oct 23-Nov 21) — Organize priorities. Accept added responsibility. Know that you do better in private. Sagittarius is the sign that you can realize success. Be spotlit. Be discreet. Play cards close to chest. One who has "talking leg" may be acting, chewing the curtain.

T A U R U S (April 20-May 20) — Contract, renew, or follow through. These may be on agenda. You may be pulled in two directions. Choose one which sees you rising above the party line. Teach and learn. Aquarian figures prominently.

G E M I N I (May 21-June 20) — Be flexible. Go around obstacles. Avoid direct confrontation. There's no excuse for "junk foods." Your digestive and nervous system need special care now. Know it and act as if aware of it. You meet some fascinating people. You're on the right track.

C I G A R (June 21-July 22) — Unusual reactions to your efforts come from young persons. Those involved in romantic sense. Personal magnetism is activated. Partner, mate is likely to be improved. DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Wishing Well®

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
